Boardwalk Art Show dates set

Dates for the 29th Annual Boardwalk Art Show, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, have been set for June 21-24, 1984. The yearly event, which runs continuously for 10 blocks along the oceanfront boardwalk, offers artists and craftspeople an attractive opportunity to exhibit and sell their work. Last year the show attracted more than 300,000 visitors to view and purchase the work of 633 artists from 32 states and France selected from a field of over 1400 applicants. Sales tax records reflected total art sales exceeded $600,000.

Artists whose work meets the criteria and standards for entry are encouraged to apply. There are no residence restrictions. All work must be original, created by the applicant and of professional quality. Eligible media categories include: oil and acrylic painting, watercolors, graphics, drawings, sculpture, photography, mixed media, ceramics and pottery, creative crafts (fiber, glass, metal, wood) and jewelry.

Over $10,500 in cash prizes will be awarded including a $2,500 Best-in-Show purchase award, the $1,500 Virginia Governor's Trophy, a $1,000 Award of Excellence and a $500 Award of Distinction along with a host of smaller awards.

The first Boardwalk Art Show was held in July, 1956 to develop the visual arts in the Tidewater region of Virginia and North Carolina. Today, the show is one of the largest of its type in the United States.

Application deadline is Thursday, March 1. Call or write the Virginia Beach Arts Center, 1711 Arctic Avenue, Virginia Beach, Virginia 23451, 423-0000 for information.

B.I.E. Day scheduled

The Virginia Beach Council of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce will sponsor its Second Annual Business-Industry-Education (BIE) Day on Thursday, Feb. 9.

The purpose of this program is to bring about a better understanding and appreciation between educators and the business community. This is achieved through a day-long agenda of orientations during which teachers spend time in a business environment, experiencing the free enterprise system. At the same time the business executives hosting the visits are exposed to the workings of the educational system.

Over 100 teachers from the city's public elementary and secondary schools have been selected to participate in the program. About 75 businesses have signed to host these teachers and to provide them with lunch.

During the afternoon all BIE Day participants will meet at the Virginia Beach Pavilion to hear an address by National Teacher of the Year Lee Hay, an English teacher from Manchester, Connecticut.

"Call Me Madam" opens

By Theresa Worrall

When the Little Theatre of Virginia Beach opens its next show, the musical "Call Me Madam," the cast will boast a President and a Past President.

The current President of the Little Theatre, Edgar Hurd, will appear in the role of the Grand Duke. Edgar is a native of Liverpool, England. He has resided in this country for the past 10 years. His Presidency of the theatre spans three years and his association with the Little Theatre has involved being a jack of all trades—changing light bulbs, stepping into a needed role here, stage managing there. Some of the shows he has appeared in are "Odd Couple," "Oliver," and "Student Prince."

Edgar is a sailing enthusiast and has raced to Bermuda and back again. He plans to participate in the Bermuda Ocean Race this summer.

The many hours devoted to the theatre is understood by his wife, Shirley, who is a well known actress in the area. Daughter Elizabeth, a freshman at Randolph Macon also shares her parents' stage appreciation since she is a model associated with Models Inc.

Edgar's primary goal during his presidential reign is to retire the mortgage on the theatre building before his term expires.

The past president of Little Theatre Virginia Beach, Betty Gray, will be playing the role of the Grand Duchess in "Call Me Madam." She served as President of the Little Theatre Virginia Beach for two years and has held every office in the organization. Betty has done just about every job in the theatre—costumes, lights, props and set construction.

Betty has appeared in such plays as "My Fair Lady," "A Little Night Music," "Gigi," "The Importance of Being Earnest" and many more. Her directing credits include "Knights of The White Magnolia," "Oldest Living Graduate" and "Mornings at Seven" to name a few.

Betty is a native of Virginia Beach and is married to John Gray, a retired Marine officer, also an actor. Betty comes from an acting family as well. Her brother Jim English, has acted and is a past president. Daughter Stephanie—and granddaughter Sara have both acted in plays. Betty is a whirlwind of activity in the community. She was the first female lay reader in the Episcopal diocese of Southern Virginia. She has served on committees such as Arts and Humanities; See CALL, page 3

Bush walks s... but carries a big kick!

Virginia Beach Black Belt looking for a world title

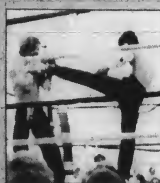

By Greg Goldfarb
Editor

Curtis Bush and a ladyfriend were walking down the boardwalk one night last summer with nothing more on their minds than the cool sea breezes and the moonlight.

Bush, a world-ranked Virginia Beach kickboxer, was telling his friend about one of his recent fights when he noticed that they were being followed by three drunk fellows.

"They were telling me what they were going to do to me; they were going to hit me and all that," Bush, a black belt, recalls. "They were saying a lot of garbage so I put my hands behind my back and told them to hit me if they want. But I also told them that 'if you touch me I'll kill you.'"

"It was the same group of kids. They got me in elementary school. They got me in junior high and that's when I started taking karate. They didn't mess with me anymore after that." — Bush

The guys backed down and Bush and his friend went on about their business.

That is about as close as Bush has come outside of the ring to hurting somebody. Inside the ring, however, it's an entirely different story.

Bush, 21, has been studying Tang Soo Do, a Korean style karate, for eight years. His combined professional and amateur record is 19-2 with 13 knockouts, nine of them in the first round, four of those with kicks.

Outside of the ring, Bush, a business management student at TCC, is passive by nature. But once inside the ring he explodes, thus earning him the nickname "The Explosive" from his opponents.

The son of a retired naval lieutenant commander, Bush was born in Portsmouth, Va., and after living in Italy for two years moved to Virginia Beach at the age of eight. He attended Pembroke Elementary School, Independence Junior High and Princess Anne High School, graduating in 1980. Looking back, Bush remembers being picked on for most of his life until he started taking karate.

"It was the same group of kids," Bush remembers. "They got me in elementary school. They got me in junior high and that's when I started taking karate. They didn't mess with me anymore after that." Bush said the kids never really hurt him, they just harassed him in the lockerroom and teased him. "I was like the scape goat," he added.

Bush decided to try karate because his two sisters and two brothers were already active in sports, he wanted to be able to defend himself. He also admired the late Bruce Lee, one of the oriental masters of the martial arts.

"I wanted to learn how to defend myself in case anybody picked on me," Bush said. "But, yeah, I was looking at some of those Bruce Lee movies and wanted to learn how to kick."

"After the fight you care. You don't want the guy still lying there. But while you're hitting him and his eyes are rolled back and the blood's flying you don't stop to think you're really hurting someone." — Bush

Bush began studying karate in 1976 at the Nima Karate School, where he now teaches. He earned his black belt in 1981 and began kickboxing in 1980.

At first he didn't like the boxing part of it, but now he wants to be the kickboxing world champion. Bush said Bubba Walters of Chesapeake holds the state professional title, but can't be located for a match.

"Walters holds the professional title and we can't seem to find him," Bush said. "He won't return (promoters) calls. It's like he's disappeared."

Bush practices six or seven days a week, three to four hours a day. He also runs six to eight miles daily. The heavy training paid off for Bush during the ESPN appearances. The first man he beat, who held a Florida state title at the time, was knocked out in the first round. The second opponent, who has 8-0 with five ko's, was stopped by Bush in the second.

Bush describes his first TV fight: "I went out there storming," Bush said. "I guess I was kinda nervous because it was on television and I must have gone crazy. I just went out there and started throwing punches and kicks." He finished his opponent with a spinning bottom fist.

"I put a jab at his body," Bush said, "and he put his hand out to parry it and I just caught him clean. He didn't see it."

In the second television match the fight was stopped in the second round after Bush cut his opponent's eye, both below and above it.

"I went out there storming. I guess I was kinda nervous because it was on television and I must have gone crazy. I just went out there and started throwing punches and kicks." — Bush

Bush has black hair

Bush admits that when he's in the ring, he's out to hurt the other person before they hurt him. But he does not hate his competitors.

"I like pretty much everybody I fight," Bush said. "I mean, there are no negative feelings, like you hate the guy's guts or anything. But you want to do as much damage as you can; because he's trying to do it to you."

Like most good fighters, Bush knows when he's hurt his opponent and when to come in for the kill.

"Like you hit a guy with a good shot and you see his eyes rolled up," Bush said. "You know you've gotten him stunned. That's when the killer instinct comes out and you swarm all over him and you keep punching or kicking until the guy falls down. There's nothing going through your mind that I'm seriously hurting somebody. But it's that, it's like the guy is an object and you try to knock him down."

After a fighter has fallen, Bush doesn't like to see him hurt.

"After the fight you care," he said, "you don't want the guy still lying there. But while you're hitting him and his eyes are rolled back and the blood's flying you don't stop to think you're really hurting someone."

fight took its toll. There was one punch...

"I like pretty much everybody I fight. I mean, there are no negative feelings, like you hate the guy's guts or anything. But you want to do as much damage as you can; because he's trying to do it to you." — Bush

"Oh yeah," Bush said. "I didn't know where I was. When you don't see the blow; that's the one that will knock you down. One minute you're fighting and the next you're lying on the ground and everything's in kinda slow motion."

Kickboxing is a relatively new sport and referees are careful, Bush says, not to let it attain a bad name by allowing any of the fighters to come near death.

But kickboxing's popularity is increasing and so is the battle between boxers and kickboxers over which sport is better.

"It works two ways," Bush said. "If you fight with someone who's throwing hands and feet at you it's a lot harder to fight them; if they can't get you with one they'll get you with another. But also, when you're just boxing, you can't rely on your feet. So, if you get tagged and want to kick at the guy to keep him away from you, you can't do that. He's going to be on you."

Bush, who says he usually trains to get as much power as he can from his kicks and punches, says his strongest attribute in the ring is his patience.

"I'm patient," he said. "Rarely do I really just go all out. I try to keep my hands up and use a good stiff jab."

In the ring Bush wears eight-ounce boxing gloves, and safety padding over his feet. His four knockout kicks were roundhouses, he said. Although traditionally kicks were viewed as being slower than punches and not as accurate, a properly placed one can do damage.

Bush recalls in Canada how he hurt his opponent.

"I kicked him in the head and the whole top of his nose came off," Bush remembers. "It just kinda ripped off. And I saw the blood was oozing out and that's why they stopped the fight." The blow was delivered by a left-footed spinning roundhouse kick.

Bush also remembers an incident in Lynchburg. "I broke his nose, but it was over there somewhere," Bush said pointing towards his cheek and ear. "You know? It looked gross."

At 6'0" and 150 Bush has the eyes on the world title. He says he's not sure he'll get it, but he's sure he's going to try.

Too much time on guns

Some people are wasting a lot of time and breath in trying to overturn the police chief's and the city's attempt to keep handguns out of a criminal's or potential criminal's hands.

Basically, when a person in Virginia Beach applies for a handgun permit a quick police check is conducted on the applicant, in order that no guns are knowingly placed in a known felon's or mentally unbalanced person's hands.

But some people are insisting that the measures are an infringement of a person's constitutional right to bear arms. This is not true. A person's right to own or carry a gun is not being denied, unless there is good reason. No one can argue that the Constitution intended for anyone other than honest, decent men to carry guns.

What city officials have done strengthens the Constitution's objectives. Not tear them down.

Paying for the arts

OK Virginia Beach, your cultural future is at the end of your pocketbook.

With three major fundraising undertakings now underway—the arts center, the marine science museum and the central library, tens of millions of dollars will be spent to this end.

The idea is not so much that every local resident donate $5,000 to each of the three forthcoming cultural amenities, but rather, the community must get behind projects which are implemented by other groups in the city.

With enough projects, involving the hundreds of thousands of people living in the city, new facilities could cost taxpayers less. That is, if everybody pulls together first, then chips in.

Sandbridge and sewers

It does seem a little odd that homeowners in Virginia Beach's exclusive Sandbridge section of the city, who spend millions on their homes and lots, still have to use septic tanks.

Face it, if the use of septic tanks was preferable over sewer lines, society would still be using them vigorously. But apparently they're not.

Sandbridge residents want to hook up with city sewer lines. Those who live directly on the shoreline are already battling a horrendous erosion problem only to have it compounded by exposed septic tanks.

It seems that the people living down there deserve better than this.

Helping helps

There was somebody who said that a person never stands so tall as when they stoop to help a child. That's true and the same axiom applies for crippled, elderly, sick or mentally retarded citizens.

The Mental Retardation/Development Disabilities program, City of Virginia Beach, needs volunteers to work on a one-to-one basis after school hours and on weekends with mentally retarded youngsters. A volunteer is also needed to help a young man with his Civil Service and GED exam.

Oftentimes people live in a world where they think no one really cares. No one can accuse Virginia Beach for not caring.

Letters

Thank you for prompt and informative article

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

I would like to take the opportunity to congratulate you on a very fine article you wrote on the incident of a man in a pickup truck approaching some of our students at Malibu Elementary School. You were very accurate and very informative. It is really a frightening thing to have this happen. The information that you relayed as well as the fine letter that Mr. John Prine, our principal, wrote does so much to inform parents of this danger.

I would also like to reaffirm our appreciation to Mr. Prine for his quick response in this incident. He was quick to inform students and their parents, leaving nothing to the imagination.

Again, thank you for your prompt and informative article. You served the community well.

Mrs. Donna Suggs, President,
Malibu PTA

Malibu principal praised

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

I would like to commend the Principal of Malibu Elementary School, Mr. John Prine, for the way he handled the recent problem at Malibu involving the man in the truck trying to pick up children on their way home from school. Mr. Prine spoke to the children on the intercom two different days cautioning them to be aware of this man and asking the older children to watch out for the younger. His warning seemed to impress my first grader much more than my many lectures. The fact that it actually happened in her school really made an impact on her and her friends. The older kids really were watching out for the younger ones and it meant a lot to me to know they were concerned. Mr. Prine then sent home a letter to the parents giving all the information about this man and advising parents how to handle this situation.

It could have been a very bad situation and I am glad my children attend a school which made us aware of what was going on so that we, as parents, could be extra alert.

Sincerely,
Mary K. Lawrence, Malibu Drive,

Special months observed

Both American History Month and Black History Month are celebrated during the month of February. Therefore, it is appropriate that we highlight both observances with an examination of books available in the Virginia Beach Public Library on the subject of slavery and racism in Virginia.

Although all Virginia history books deal to some extent with the issue of slavery in the Old Dominion, the library owns two books which discuss the topic in depth. They are Edmund Morgan's "American Slavery-American Freedom: The Ordeal of Colonial Virginia" and "Race Relations in Virginia And Miscegenation In The South 1776-1860" by James Johnston.

The Morgan book attempts to find a reason behind a unique historical paradox. Why did so many colonial Virginia revolutionaries own slaves? After analyzing social and political beliefs, economic conditions and demographics he concludes that the pressures of social and economic necessities on the ruling class eventually outweigh any egalitarian convictions. The result was a gradual worsening of race relations and eventual institutionalization of slavery.

Johnston follows a slightly different path in "Race Relations In Virginia." He relies primarily upon original documents such as legislative petitions, letters, diaries and executive papers to tell the story. The author cites both pro and anti slavery documents, showing just how divided the Commonwealth was on the issue.

The divisiveness of slavery is even more evident in

The Lottery Bill

By J. W. (Billy) O'Brien

Nearly a year has passed since the Virginia House of Delegates turned down my proposal for a state lottery, a proposal that had been endorsed by its General Laws committee.

In that year's time, states that have lotteries, including the nearby states of Maryland, Delaware, and Pennsylvania, have reaped many millions of dollars in badly needed revenues from that source.

Virginia, by contrast, gets not one cent, although day after day we read of the pleas for additional funds for such worthwhile causes as teacher's salaries, education in general, programs for the elderly, environmental matters, and particularly the clean up of the Chesapeake Bay.

The list goes on and on and yet it is all too obvious we lack the revenues to fund all of these worthwhile programs. It is just as obvious that the people do not want a general tax increase and the legislature is not about to pass such an increase.

The question is then, would the people of Virginia favor a state lottery that would bring in an estimated $200 million in additional revenue each year and help fund some of those worthwhile programs that are now in jeopardy?

There is one certain way to find out. Schedule a referendum on the subject this Fall and let the voice of the people decide the issue. Surely, no legislator or citizen can object to letting the citizens of this Commonwealth be the final arbiters of this matter. For those, who for political reasons may be worried about voting in favor of a lottery, they can simply say on a matter of this nature they favored letting the people decide.

On my own part, as one who has been the chief proponent of a state operated lottery, I have absolutely no hesitation in handing the matter over to the people. I truly believe they will vote in favor of a lottery. Should they not do so, then I would immediately discontinue forever all efforts on my part to get such a lottery approved.

I would be confident of success, however, because of a number of indicators that the time is ripe in Virginia for a lottery. I noted that the silver-haired legislature, hardly a radical group, went on record in favor of a lottery. I have also noted the hundreds of thousands of residents in Northern Virginia who play lotteries in Washington DC and Maryland each week. It has been estimated that a quarter of the business done by those lotteries comes from Virginians. This means that these Virginians are contributing valuable tax dollars to other jurisdictions

Alice Freehling's "Drift Toward Dissolution." This book examines the slavery debates in the Virginia legislature following Nat Turner's insurrection. These 1831-1832 debates were instrumental in charting the Commonwealth's course to war and to the eventual succession of western Virginia.

The Virginia Beach libraries also own two books which highlight two periods that contradict the notion that race relations worsened at a continual and constant rate. "Myne Owne Ground; Race And Freedom On Virginia's Eastern Shore, 1640-1676" by T. H. Brown and Stephen Innes describes how a large population of free Blacks lived and prospered on the Eastern Shore during the mid-seventeenth century. This brief period of enlightenment ended with the shift in racial attitudes following Bacon's Rebellion.

Robert Engls likewise shows a period of history when Blacks flourished, both economically and politically, in his study of Hampton, Virginia following the Civil War. "Freedom's First Generation also documents the end of this era when racism returned in an even more virulent form at the close of Reconstruction.

February indeed is a perfect month to begin a study of this important issue. The five books discussed in this article may be just the place to start. We hope to see you at the Virginia Beach Public Library soon.

Delegate enters "Lemon" Bill

Delegate Glenn B. McClanan has introduced a bill to help Virginians obtain repairs or reimbursement when they purchase a new car which is defective.

Approximately fifteen states have passed such laws, patterned after legislation first passed in Connecticut approximately three years ago. In summary, the law requires the car manufacturer to refund the purchase price, if the defect is not corrected and it was covered in the vehicle warranty.

The bill provides that the manufacturer or dealer shall make such repairs as is necessary to conform the vehicle to the warranties by repairing or correcting any defect or condition which substantially impairs the use or value of the vehicle. If this is not done, purchase price has to be refunded, less a deduction for the value of the use customers received from the vehicle. The customer is presumed to have done all that is necessary to have the car repaired if he or she has returned it to repair the same defect four or more times, or if the vehicle is out of service by reason of the defect for thirty or more calendar days during the warranty period.

This legislation has received a very favorable response according to McClanan, and is being supported by the Division of Consumer Affairs of the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The City of Virginia Beach has begun a year-long effort to assure full compliance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. This Act guarantees specific rights in federally funded programs and activities to persons who qualify as handicapped.

The city is certifying that it does not discriminate on the basis of handicapped status in the admission of, access to, treatment in or employment in its programs and activities. Robert R. Matthias, of the City's Grants Office, will coordinate compliance with the non-discrimination requirements contained in Section 51.55 of the Revenue Sharing Regulations.

Matthias will coordinate a City self-evaluation process required under Section 504 which will determine the extent to which City programs, activities and operations may require modification to ensure full participation by handicapped persons. The self-evaluation process will be conducted by the Independence Center, a private non-profit Independent Living Center, with the support and guidance of the Mayor's Committee on the Handicapped and other interested citizens. The self-evaluation is expected to be completed by October 1, 1984. If it reveals a need for structural modifications or changes to city programs, a transition plan containing the necessary steps and schedules will be prepared.

Consider van-pooling

Relax on the way to work

Would you like to relax on your way to work and save hundreds of dollars a year? If so, you should consider van-pooling as a way to commute.

Tidewater Regional Transit and the Virginia Department of Highways and Transportation both provide van pool plans.

TRT estimates that if you live 10 miles from work, drive alone in a standard size car and pay just $1 for daily parking and 50 cents for tolls, you're paying a total of $1,900 a year.

To reduce costs, TRT

sponsors area van pool programs on a non-profit basis, leasing deluxe vans to qualified drivers who agree to drive at least eight fellow workers to and from work. The driver usually rides free and he or she can use the van at other times for personal business.

The Virginia Department of Highways recently initiated a program called the Virginia Van Plan. This plan is an agreement between the Department and a private leasing company which makes van pooling available to all Virginia residents who do not have such a plan in their area.

Virginia Beach citizens are encouraged to take advantage of van pooling as a means of commuting. For further information on TRT's Van Pooling, contact Carol Russell at 627-9291. For further information on the Virginia Van Plan call toll-free 1-800-VAN-PLAN.

Persons with information about these, or any other burglaries, should call Crime Solvers at 427-0000. Rewards are also paid for information about the location of stolen property, wanted persons, and illegal drugs and for information regarding any crimes committed in Virginia Beach.

Callers never have to give their names or testify in court to be eligible for the rewards.

Crime Solvers

Church burglary info sought

The Virginia Beach Crime Solvers program is offering a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information that leads to the arrest of those responsible for a series of break-ins to churches in Virginia Beach.

Between Jan. 30 and Dec. 4, 1983, there were 36 burglaries to area churches. The thieves were indiscriminate as they stole from nearly all denominations. Some of the churches burglarized were Rock Church, 640 Kempsville Road; Good Hope Lutheran, 1489 Laskin Road, First Assembly of God, 222 Old Donation Parkway, First Colonial Baptist, 929 First Colonial Road, and First Church of Nazarene, 4413 Wishart Road.

Thieves entered the churches by several means, including breaking windows and climbing in, as well as prying open doors and windows.

The items taken have been valued at more than $13,000. The stolen property included jewelry, stereo equipment, stamps, a fire extinguisher, food, clocks, a P.A. system, typewriters, a trombone,

Beach's holiday project delivers 887 baskets

The 1983 Holiday Project, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Department of Social Services, provided low-income families with more food baskets and more toys for children than ever before. The volunteer staff worked 767 hours to coordinate community donations to: collect and deliver 887 food baskets at Thanksgiving and Christmas; arrange for 250 needy children to receive gifts from the Marine Corp's Toys for Tots; arrange for 601 low income families to receive financial aid from the Joy Fund; and arrange for toys to be donated to foster children. The following comparisons demonstrate how this program has grown:

Thanksgiving Food Baskets	302	235	215
Christmas Food Baskets	585	368	200
Toys for Tots	250	250	203
Joy Fund	601	559	345

In addition to helping low income families, the project and volunteers also provided 205 foster children with 615 gifts including puzzles, stuffed bears, dolls, coloring books, footballs, clothing, watches, bicycles, appliances and an adult three-wheel bike for an autistic teenager. The collective donations for foster care children were estimated at a $10,250 value.

Donations to the Holiday Project came from community groups and organizations, churches, private businesses, City employees, individual citizens and volunteers.

Thoroughgood Music Club holds orientation session

President, TMSC

During the recent January meeting, The Thoroughgood Music Study Club held an orientation session. The purpose was to acquaint the members with the histories of the National Federation of Music Clubs, the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs and the Thoroughgood Music Study Club itself.

The session was followed by a recital presented by Mary Ellen Carter, a member of the club. A violinist, composer, painter and an author, she featured her own composition, "Fantasia". The program was concluded with a luncheon prepared by Doris Lowe, co-hosted by Mary Zoll.

The Thoroughgood Music Study Club, the only federated music in Virginia Beach, celebrates its 10th anniversary in 1984. In those 10 years, two members had won Federation-sponsored competitions. Doris Lowe, a past president, a pianist, won a composition competition and Karyn Joaquin, a student special member, was the State winner of the Brevard scholarship in piano, to the Brevard Music Center, North Carolina, in 1982.

Local film company debuts new Stihl industry films

Image and Sound Productions, Ltd. has completed production of three 16mm films for Stihl, Inc. Both firms are located in Virginia Beach. The films, which are designed to promote chain saw safety practices in the professional logging industry, were each shot in different areas of the country where logging practices vary with the terrain and the type of timber native to the region.

Image and Sound President Tim Hixman, cinematographer for the project, along with writer Bill Baratta, location sound recordist Alan Sawyer, location sound recordist, Stihl photographer and editor Gerard Lewandowski and production assistant Linda Pearson, traveled to Washington and Oregon during the summer of 1983, where filming for the Pacific Northwest Region took place. Michigan was chosen as the location for the Great Lakes version and the crew traveled to the Atlanta, Georgia area in the fall to shoot the film for the Southeast Region.

A slide show using still shots on each of these locations is being produced concurrently with the films for use in all four of the country. The four productions are to be released in the early part of this year and shown to professional timbermen across the country during employee indoctrination, crew safety meetings and in many Stihl dealerships. The films will also be televised on many Public Broadcast Stations throughout the United States.

Another 16mm production to be released this year is "Seasons In The Sun", a 30-minute film for the State Office of Emergency and Energy Services in Virginia. This film will be used to inform and educate the public on energy conservation via use of passive solar energy. It does not promote expensive or elaborate renovations to the home, but shows how anyone can use a variety of simple techniques to cut energy consumption for heating and cooling.

Beach Girl Scouts learn about outdoors

McDonald's Garden Center on Independence Boulevard provided an opportunity for approximately 100 Brownie Scouts of the Colonial Coast Girl Scout Council to expand on the Girl Scout program area "The World of the Out-of-Doors."

Girls of troops 166, 225, 247, 297 and 362 from the Bayside Service Unit, made edible "ornaments" that would attract birds for a Christmas tree decorating contest held recently at the Center. The trees have been strategically placed and have become feeding stations for birds for the coming winter months.

Troop #166 under the leadership of Mrs. Joanne Casmer, Miss Tricia Casmer and Miss Sandy Bedford won first place. Troop #225 under Mrs. Sandy Colbourn and Mrs. Kittygale McMoon won second, and troop #362 with leaders Mrs. Vickie Cox and Mrs. Terry Rhodes was third. All girls and the leaders were served hot chocolate and cookies when the trees were completed. Mr. Jay Mears, manager of McDonalds, and Mrs. Joan Kreimer coordinated this community service event.

By Lisa Versprille

Scott Armstrong Spence, the 14-year-old son of Marilyn and Gordon Spence, of 3561 Dandelion Crescent, will serve as a Page during the 1984 session of the Virginia General Assembly, which convened on Jan. 11.

Scott, a student at Princess Anne Junior High School, was chosen by Delegate Glenn B. McClanahan, who represents the 84th House of Delegates District which includes the Green Run area. McClanahan chose Scott for the position pursuant to a unique merit-based selection process he used to assure that the best qualified student that was interested in the position received his nomination.

Scott attended a school Honor Society meeting last Fall where he and his fellow members were given letters from McClanahan and principle Norman Fields, telling them about the opportunity to become Pages at the General Assembly. A few weeks later, Scott was interviewed by a panel of three teachers from outside the 84th District.

Based on these interviews and the application, McClanahan nominated the young man to A. L. Philpott, Speaker of the House. In December, Scott was informed by the Speaker that he had been chosen as a Page for the 1984 Virginia General Assembly.

HAPPY CHINESE NEW YEAR 4682!

February 2nd Ushers In Year Of The Rat; Time To Try Your Hand At Chinese Cookery

Looking for an occasion to have a dinner party? Why not celebrate Chinese New Year which in 1984 falls on Thursday, February 2.

La Choy Oriental food experts have developed two recipes which can be made easily using food products and utensils available to everyone.

Beef and Vegetables with Peppery Soy Sauce utilizes the stir or quick-fry method of cooking for which the Chinese are famous. This dish can be cooked at the table in an electric skillet or electric wok or cooked in conventional cookware on a stove top. Serve with crunchy chow mein noodles. An unusual, tasty side dish of Cauliflower and Water Chestnuts which also can be quickly prepared complements the entree.

BEEF AND VEGETABLES with PEPPERY SOY SAUCE (4 Servings)

- Sauce:
 - 1 cup dry sherry
 - 1/2 cup La Choy Soy Sauce
 - 1 tablespoon white wine vinegar
 - 1/4 teaspoon hot red pepper sauce or to taste
 - 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- Beef and Vegetables:
 - 1 lb. sirloin or round steak, sliced paper thin (also meat when it is partially frozen)
 - 2 onions, sliced thin
 - 1/2 lb. red or white radishes, sliced thin
 - 1 medium cucumber, seeded and sliced thin
 - 1 can (8 oz.) La Choy Water Chestnuts, drained, sliced thin
 - 8 green onions, cut into 1-inch lengths
 - 1/4 cup butter.

Combine all ingredients for sauce and blend well. Divide evenly among four small table serving dishes.

Arrange meat and vegetables attractively on a platter. Melt butter in electric skillet, or wok set for 375 degrees (on stove top, set conventional skillet or wok over medium high heat). Add vegetables and cook, stirring constantly, until partially cooked, about 3 minutes. Add beef and continue to cook and stir for 3 to 4 minutes more, or until meat is cooked to taste. Spoon onto individual serving plates or place in serving dish. Dip cooked meat and vegetables into sauce as desired.

CAULIFLOWER with WATER CHESTNUTS (6 Servings)

- 1 head cauliflower (about 2 lbs.), cut into flowerets
- 1/4 cup chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon dry sherry
- 1 tablespoon La Choy Soy Sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon cold water
- 2 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger can (8 oz.) La Choy Water Chestnuts, drained, sliced thin
- 2 green onions, minced
- 1/4 cup minced cooked ham

Blanch cauliflower flowerets in boiling salted water to cover for 3 minutes; drain in colander and rinse with cold water to stop cooking.

In a small bowl, combine chicken broth, sherry, and soy sauce, set aside. In another small bowl, blend cornstarch and cold water; set aside.

Place wok or large skillet over medium high heat. When it is hot, add 2 tablespoons cooking oil. Add ginger and cook and stir until it is golden, about 30 seconds. Add water chestnuts and green onions, cook, stirring, until heated through, about 1 minute. Add cauliflower a cup at a time, stirring and turning each addition so that the flowerets become coated with oil. Add chicken broth mixture and bring to a boil. Reduce heat to moderate and simmer the vegetable mixture 2 minutes until cauliflower is crisp-tender. Stir cornstarch mixture and add to pan.

Continue cooking and stirring until sauce has thickened and has thoroughly coated cauliflower. Place vegetables in serving bowl, topping with minced ham. Serve immediately.

If you haven't mailed your entry for the 1984 Delmarva Chicken Cooking Contest, now is the time to do so. To be eligible for competition, entries must be postmarked by March 1, 1984. The grand prize includes an expense-paid trip for two to Hawaii, $1,000, a microwave oven, gas grill, cookware, an electric mixer and more. Additional cash and prizes will be shared by second and third place winners.

Entering is easy. All you need is a recipe for broiler-fryer chicken - one that is a little bit unique, yet appealing to consumer tastes. Entries should make four to eight servings and total preparation time must not exceed three hours.

Two finalists each from the eligible states of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, will be selected to prepare their recipes for final judging at a cook-off in Salisbury, Maryland on June 9, 1984. Scoring will be based on the recipe's strength in appeal, taste, appearance and ease of preparation.

Recipe entries and requests for official entry forms should be mailed to DCCC, c/o Delmarva Poultry, R.D.2, Box 47, Georgetown, DE 19947.

Home prices may rise

Prices for single-family homes will likely increase during the first quarter of 1984.

However, mortgage interest rates are expected to remain at current levels and even drop in some areas, relocation specialists of the nationwide RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service noted in a recent survey.

Sixty-seven percent of the respondents said they expect home prices to rise in the period January through March, while 28 percent indicated that prices will stabilize and 5 percent anticipated a price decrease.

In addition, 74 percent of relocation specialists responding to the survey said they expect mortgage interest rates in the next three months to remain at what they currently have been averaging in their areas—12 percent to 14 percent for traditional 30-year fixed rate mortgage loans and 9½ percent to 13 percent for adjustable rate mortgage loans.

More encouraging for homebuyers was the prediction from 21 percent of the respondents that mortgage interest rates will fall during the first quarter of 1984, while only 5 percent anticipated an increase in interest rates.

An overwhelming 98 percent of the respondents said they were optimistic about the total real estate market in 1984.

The continually improving economic climate is accounting in large part for this favorable response, said the RELO service, one of the nation's largest referral network of independent Realtors based in Chicago.

A large number of survey respondents—81 percent—indicated that relocation activity will increase, in many cases by a sizeable margin, during 1984.

With nearly 1,200-member companies and more than 2,500-member offices, the RELO service of independent Realtors specializes in helping families to sell a house in one geographic area and buy a home in another.

Discuss banking

Filipino businessmen meet for breakfast

By Fred L. Lingad

Recently, Atlantic National Bank hosted a breakfast meeting for local Filipino businessmen and professionals at the Holiday Inn.

ANB top officials gave pertinent information to their guests and announced building a branch bank somewhere between South Independence and Princess Anne, Virginia Beach, and inviting the guests to be partners in progress.

ANB vice president James N. Banks presided over the meeting and ANB assistant president Oliver F. Harrel delivered the invocation. ANB President and CEO Charles M. Reynolds, Jr., welcomed the guest and ANB Chairman Bishop L.E. Willis gave remarks of motivation and inviting the audience, mostly Filipinos, to establish a coalition thereby promoting growth and prosperity.

In reflection on passed ANB years, it was mentioned that ANB exhibited progress and stability by adding another bank branch which is now providing excellent banking opportunities for the Portsmouth community. Prexy and CEO Reynolds, on the other hand, explained the many services ANB offers and introduced the other bank key officials and members of the staff present. He talked about the great plan for ANB's future, like the opening of another branch in Virginia Beach in May.

Another part of the plan is ANB's contribution to the community and the nation at large, like the cooperative agreement between ANB and the Department of Transportation. ANB was specifically selected to administer the pilot program with other minority institutions throughout the country. Under the agreement, ANB will provide 25 percent of the funds for the minority-owned business enterprises and women business enterprises doing business with rail-related industries. The Department of Transportation will provide 75 percent of the fund. Another program mentioned is the Development Program for Housing with a budget of $100 million.

ANB administrative vice president Oliver F. Harrel also spoke, while Dr. Kenneth E. Bauzon and Denia F. Rudy, both from the Investment Research and Finance Corporation spoke about financial opportunities available from various sources. At the end, an open forum ensued. The meeting ended with a view of ANB and the Filipino group forging ahead for progress. Shown in the picture above, left to right: ANB board chairman, Bishop L.E. Lewis; IRFC president/marketing Denia F. Rudy; ANB vice president James N. Banks; IRFC president/administration Dr. Kenneth E. Bauzon and ANB president and CEO Charles M. Reynolds, Jr.

simply because there is no opportunity for them to pay this strictly voluntary tax in their own state.

The record should be set straight on a few things. The State of Virginia gets practically no direct tax revenue from legalized bingo which is a multi-million dollar operation in Virginia. Statistics show that persons who play lotteries spend considerably less on this, pastime than those who play bingo.

A state operated lottery in Virginia would pose no more danger of infiltration from organized crime elements than the danger of infiltration into our state system of dispensing alcoholic beverages. Virginia can and will police a lottery system and insure its complete integrity.

One objection to a lottery, and one I have in fact heard from Governor Robb, is that in some states it is too heavily advertised. This can easily be taken care of by putting strict regulations on advertisements such as the regulations that are placed on the advertisements of alcoholic beverages.

Every legislator here in Richmond knows we need to increase our revenues, and every legislator knows, despite any editorial comment to the contrary, that unlike some forms of gambling, there are few compulsive lottery players. In games such as bingo and lotteries, unlike forms of gambling such as horse betting, roulette, blackjack, etc., progressive betting does little good. The reason for this is that the jackpot total remains the same for the person who purchases a one dollar ticket and there is no higher payoff to a person who buys more.

Thomas Jefferson said a lottery was a fair little voluntary tax and it remains just that today. I submit that a lottery will be supported by an overwhelming majority of Virginians if the General Assembly allows it to come to referendum. Let those legislators who believe Virginians don't want a lottery put their faith to the test by joining me in voting for a referendum this November.

City enters Cable scene

The City of Virginia Beach has begun operation of Cable Channel 29, a municipal access television station, to inform the public of current city and school programs, services and messages. Through a franchise agreement with Cox Cable Television, production equipment was supplied to the City's Joint Cable Production Unit, a cooperative effort of the City of Virginia Beach and the Public Schools.

Councilman Jones does the Bob Jones doogie!

Jones makes theatrical debut in VBLT musical comedy "Call Me Madam"

By Greg Goldfarb
Editor

Portraying a footloose U.S. Senator trying to give $200,000,000 to a foreign country, Virginia Beach City Councilman Robert Jones recently made his theatrical debut in the Virginia Beach Little Theatre's production of the Irving Berlin musical comedy "Call Me Madam." The show runs weekends through Feb. 25.

Jones said he agreed to play the part of Brockbank, whom he describes as a "lecherous girl-chasing ugly-American type," because there were too few performers and to show his support for the community arts.

"Basically, the reason I got into this was that they were having trouble getting people to play the parts," Jones said, "and I just felt that the Virginia Beach Little Theatre was an important part of our arts and entertainment community."

"And having never done it," he continued, "I thought it'd just be interesting to get involved with the organization. Also, the city gives the theatre $4,000 a year or something so I go down there to see what's happening to our money. I must say it's well spent."

Jones did not audition for the part, although director Mac McManus said he did appear before the show's musical director to make sure he could sing. Jones said he and McManus agreed that he would be "acceptable" for the part. Jones heard of the part through a friend.

Jones admits he has had "zip" acting experience, but he could not pass up the opportunity to play a Washington senator.

"Well, that's one way to do it," Jones joked, still touched by two unsuccessful bids for state office.

Jones has 17 spoken lines in the play, sings several times with the company, and is featured in a trio solo number, "I Like Ike." Jones is also concerned with the delivery of Director says "uninhibited" Jones adds personality to part

Seventeen-year Virginia Beach resident and local television personality Mac McManus directed the current Virginia Beach Little Theatre's production of "Call Me Madam." He said stage newcomer Robert Jones has fit in nicely with the cast and the production.

"He was very willing to learn and work very amicably with a very amicable cast," McManus, a Lynnhaven borough resident said.

When asked to compare Jones' acting, singing and dancing abilities, McManus said dancing, may as well not be considered and that whether he acted or sang better was a

Beach Community Chapel sets 'Sweetheart Weekend'

The Virginia Beach Community Chapel, 1261 Laskin Road, will celebrate a "Sweetheart Weekend" by showing a four-part film series, "Maximum Marriage" by Tim Timmons, noted speaker, author, counselor, humorist, and pastor.

"Why Marriage When You Can Live Together" and "The Eleven Battlegrounds of Marriage" will be shown on Friday, Feb. 10th at 7:30 p.m. "Why Are Women So Weird And Men So Strange" and "How Do You Spell Relief," will be shown on Saturday, Feb. 11 at 7:30 p.m. Following the film, on Saturday night, a desert social will be held in the Family Center.

"Maximum Marriage" is a series which uncovers misconceptions regarding the 20th century marriage. The films offer hope, encouragement, and "handles" for maximum growth in this relationship.

Tim Timmons calls men and women to a "Maximum Marriage" where they can find a dynamic "oneness" and through that "oneness" find themselves individually. The films are a wonderful blend of counsel, humor, scripture and anecdotes. Special guests in the films are baseball player Don Sutton and his wife.

The public is invited for one or both nights. Nursery will be provided and the films are free.

Number of unwanted dogs and cats in the city expected to drop

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

The number of unwanted cats and dogs is expected to drop drastically under a new ordinance which requires the neutering or spaying of animals adopted from the city animal pound.

The ordinance, adopted unanimously by Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon, will go into effect in 30 days. It requires individuals adopting cats or dogs to sign a contract agreeing to spaying or neutering of the animals within 30 days of adoption. The city also will establish an initial fee of $35 for adoption with a rebate of $25 for proof of spaying or neutering.

In recommending approval of the ordinance, City Manager Thomas H. Meuhlenbeck noted that in 1982 1,260 dogs and cats were adopted from the city pound with no requirements or incentives for the owners to have these animals spayed or neutered. As a result many produced unwanted offspring which created a problem for the Bureau of Animal Control, a nuisance to people and suffering by the homeless animals.

The ordinance was among several changes recommended by the ad hoc committee established in January 1982 to study various animal control ordinances and fee increases. Other ordinances have already been adopted.

Liz Sill, vice president of the Virginia Federation of Human Societies and a member of the ad hoc committee, said that 2,500 to 3,000 unwanted animals are born every hour in the United States. She said that she appreciated fears of the Animal Control Board that there would be a dramatic drop in adoptions as a result of the ordinance. However, she said, the city will experience other dividends. She said where similar requirements have been established there have been drastic reductions in the number of animals that have to be destroyed.

Go to Broadway

P.A. students invade New York City

By Jackie Matthews
VBS Correspondent

Twenty students from Princess Anne High School spent an exciting Christmas holiday among the 2 1/2 million people daily visiting New York. They left the Norfolk airport on Dec. 27 accompanied by their drama teacher, Mr. Joe Burnsworth, and flew to the "Big Apple" on a theatre tour.

During their visit they saw many Broadway shows among them: Cats, My One and Only, Chorus Line, LaCage DeFage and Painting Churches.

Jimmie Lindeman said, "Seeing Broadway shows are a lot different from those in high school because of the glitter, marvelous costumes and all the technical advantages which adds so much to a performance."

Pam Thompson and Jimmie met Tommy Tune and Twigg after the show My One and Only. Pam said, "they were super people, they even performed for us at the stage door."

Several of the boys saw

American Buffalo, where Lohr Brooks received a personal greeting from Al Pacino after the show.

During the trip the students saw the Statue of Liberty, Empire State Building, several cathedrals and went shopping at Macy's, Gimbels, Sak's and Tiffany's.

D.A.R. celebrates birthday

The Annual DAR George Washington Birthday Luncheon will be held Saturday, Feb. 18, at Tantom's Pine Tree Inn, 2932 Virginia Beach Boulevard, at 12 noon.

Guest Speaker will be Mrs. G.E. Honts, Jr., State Regent of the Virginia Society, Daughters of the American Revolution. Her topic will be "Washington...The Man."

Mrs. Honts, a native of Clifton Forge, where she joined the DAR 25 years ago, now resides in Eagle Rock, Va., and is employed by Botetourt County Department of Social Services. Her project at Regent of Virginia will be aiding in the restoration of Ashlawn, James Monroe's Highlands farm. The furnishings of Ashlawn are authentic Monroe family pieces. Ashlawn was owned by James Monroe for 28 years. After his presidency, Monroe was $75,000 in debt. As a result, he was forced to sell the home. In 1974, Ashlawn was left to William and Mary College, and is a small working farm today.

A delightful program has been planned by the following Chapters of District I: Great Bridge, Borough of Norfolk, Old Donation, and Sarah Constant, of Norfolk; Constantia of Suffolk; Fort Nelson of Portsmouth; Princess Anne County, Adam Thoroughgood, Lynnhaven Parish, and Francis Land of Virginia Beach; Colonel William Allen of Carrollton, Virginia.

All DAR members who wish to attend the Luncheon should make reservations with their Chapter Treasurers. Call 588-2468 for more information.

Little Theatre works

Working in a little theatre is not always easy. There's never enough money for sets, props and costumes. There is never enough time. Yet, year in and year out local theatre people throughout the nation work endless hours to add another cultural dimension to communities.

Oftentimes little theatre work goes unnoticed by much of the public and is criticized by critics. This is unfortunate. Whenever volunteers band together to present a community service the efforts should be noted, or at least they shouldn't be criticized.

Little theatre is not for professionals, although several Tidewater theatre organizations regularly pay performers. It is for those people who have the time and desire to give a small part of themselves to the community.

Little theatre is not perfect. If, for example, every cast member knew their lines and blocking as well as they knew their telephone numbers, it would not be little theatre. If every little theatre run had a well rehearsed full orchestra, it would not be little theatre.

But observers must not look at what the little theatre lacks, it must look at what it provides for that service far exceeds any of the nit-picking upper-crust criticism which should be saved for people who like to look at the dark, not the light side of the sun.

The Virginia Beach Little Theatre holds open auditions. Usually, demand for parts is not cutthroat. The Virginia Beach Little Theatre, on a yearly basis, provides enough big shows to give most talented local residents a chance to appear before the lights.

Acting and politics

In the upcoming presidential election, Jones says he favors his old college buddy Gary Hart over the frontrunner for the democratic nomination Walter Mondale.

But Jones, now an actor as well as politician and a good sport, respects Ronald Reagan.

"Let's face it, when he's been in so many movies and has seen himself and studied his actions in the westerns or the Bonzo movies or whatever," Jones said, "He, unlike you and me, knows what he looks like when he does something. But I just do it and it never occurs to me the impression I made."

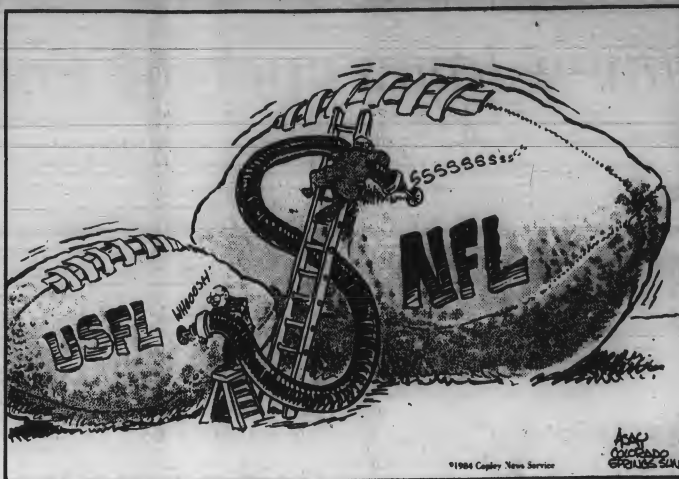

Jones, who has made television campaign commercials, says the political candidate of the 1980's will definitely have to be a television person.

"Yes, that's true. I think that's just the condition of politics today and the foreseeable future.

"Acting seems to be where it's at in politics," he added.

Jones, whose term expires in 1986, says he "is not saying yes or no" at this point, "whether he'll seek re-election.

Candidates for this spring's councilmanic election, however, are announcing. More later.

Bush story shows what hometown newspaper can do

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

I would like to commend The Virginia Beach Sun for the significant service provided to the City of Virginia Beach. The community news and the support given to the achievements of individual citizens can not be matched by any other newspaper.

The recent interview with Curtis Bush is a good example of what a hometown newspaper can do. The Sun has given support to the career of this young man as a professional kickboxer. The progress from Curtis' first pro fight to his recent world ranking has been charted on the pages of The Sun. The article which appeared in the last issue was interesting and informative. The interview with Curtis entitled "Bush walks softly but carries a big kick" was nothing short of professional journalism. Greg Goldfarb not only gave facts but an insight into how his subject thinks and an exploration of his personality. I feel it is one of the best interviews done with any fighter and I urge any reader who missed it to correct the oversight.

The people of Virginia Beach can be proud of The Virginia Beach Sun because it is a newspaper that is professionally edited and written and I want to publicly thank it for the recognition given to the hard work and achievements of Curtis Bush and I hope this letter gives some recognition to the achievements of the editor. Both Bush and Goldfarb are professionals.

In support of slurry

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

In the upcoming few weeks, the issue of coal slurry will be debated extensively in the Virginia legislature. Virginia is unique in that it is the only state that has legislation on the books prohibiting the use of eminent domain for coal slurry pipelines. In the heat of the legislative debate, I anticipate the usual railroad and railroad instigated misinformation and delaying tactics in an effort to preserve their monopoly on long distance coal haulage. I hope the below facts will be considered closely by the legislature before they vote.

*Coal slurry is a known, proven technology first patented in 1891. It has been safely and economically used since 1970 by the Black Mesa Pipeline in Arizona.

*No environmental hazards have been discovered: in fact, compared to noisy, dirty trains that sometimes cause accidents and spill toxic materials (coal slurry is clearly non-toxic), the coal pipeline comes out on top in every environmental regard.

*If coal slurry pipelines are not economic, they will not be built: even if they are not built, rail coal haulage rates will be moderated.

*Railroad jobs will not be stamped out: to the contrary, cheaper coal at the terminus will create new markets for American coal (including export markets) and will provide new mining, port, pipeline and rail jobs.

*Cheaper coal transportation rates equals cheaper electricity. It also means more jobs for Virginians in areas where coal is mined and where electricity is consumed.

Coal slurry pipeline legislation is clearly in the benefit of all Virginians. A narrow selfish parochial interest should not be allowed to block these benefits.

Off The Record

By Greg Goldfarb

I'm not blind, you old bat

"May I help you?" the shapely lady, wearing glasses, asked.

"I think I need glasses," I said like a fool.

"Do you have a prescription?"

"Yes."

"Well, step this way and we'll see if we can't find something you like."

The only thing I would have liked at the time was to be the heck out of there. Here I am, struck down before I'm 30 with nearsightedness. After 27 years of being a man who never wore any type of jewelry, I became a nerd wearing glasses.

"Come over here please," she said, pointing to a tacky long table as if I was blind as a bat.

"How do you like these," she asked.

"Oh groovy!" I sniped.

"Well, how about these? Try them on."

"These are ridiculous."

"This is obviously the first time you've ever gotten glasses."

"This girl was real smart. In fact I knew her in college. She wore glasses then but I never thought she'd end up here."

"How much are these?" I really didn't care what they looked like I just wanted to find out how much this deal was going to cost.

"$135."

"Great. I'll take them." I wanted to get this degrading experience over with as quickly as possible. The glasses were similar to those worn by George Will, certainly one of Washington's more flashy journalists.

"Come over here please," she said, pointing to a tacky long table as if I was blind as a bat.

She sticks a ruler to my face and says, "Look up. Look down. Look all around." She was measuring how far my eyeball moved. Sure.

"Come back this afternoon and they'll be ready."

I go back. Try them on. Receive an eyeglass case but no cleaning cloth. "Where's the cloth?" I hissed.

"Where's the cloth?"

"I'm sorry but we don't supply those any more."

"The lens cleaning cloth?"

"That's right."

I was furious. After all this. No cloth. But what did you expect out of a place which put eyeglasses on plants, pictures, dolls and cats sitting in the waiting room.

There was an aquarium across the room but I didn't dare look inside. I left, seeing better. I climbed inside my car.

"Well, here I am," I sighed. Half blind. Wife just left me and the cat up and died.

Saw a friend a few minutes later.

"Well, at least you've still got your senses of touch, smell, taste and hearing."

"Say what?"

matter of perspective.

But in general McManus, who had directed seven VBLT plays, said Jones turned in a "good, very good" performance during the sell-out opening weekend. "He projected some personality into the thing."

McManus said Jones' strong point is that he is "uninhibited," and also said that the lawyer exhibited a high level of dedication and commitment to the part especially in light of "walking in" like he did.

McManus said the last city official he can recall performing in little theatre was the recently resigned assistant to the city manager Benjamin Moore who performed several years ago in a comedy.

Laughing with him, not at him the lines, some of which are supposed to generate laughter.

"I've got two or three lines that are supposed to illicit laughter, and I do worry," Jones admits. "In fact I'd like to hear how the fellow who played Brockbank on Broadway managed the lines to make sure he did get the laugh."

Following two sellouts on opening weekend, Jones found out that this worrying was for naught.

"Yeah, the people did laugh," Jones said referring to the line he delivers after arriving unexpectedly at a social party: "Had a stroke of luck. My wife broke her leg."

In Jones' featured song, his lines include, "Election year is past, the people spoke at last, they voted nearly 60,000 strong... remember how we laughed, when Ike made up with Taft, chances then I thought went down the drain."

Jones has no fear of the stage, noting, "I guess my political experience has numbed me to stage fright a little bit." And although he says he "has not been bitten by the thespian bug," he says performing and generating are very different concepts.

"There is a cost-benefit factor to be weighed in here," he said. "How much psychic income I'm getting out of this; at the same time I'm losing financial income because I do a lot of work at night." Jones estimated that he spent two weeks in rehearsals for the less than two-hour show.

Jones, who naturally plays the part of a democrat, said the show is well done and that his friends will certainly laugh at his performance. But they will not be laughing alone.

"I can guarantee that when my friends and acquaintances see me they will laugh," Jones said. "I'd like to have my friends laughing with me and not at me."

Sea Cadet Corps at Oceana

A new division of the Naval Sea Cadet Corps is forming in the NAS Oceana area for service to the young men and women of the Virginia Beach community.

The Naval Sea Cadet Corps (NSCC) is a volunteer youth training program for young men and women, from 14 to 17 years of age. The Sea Cadets are given the opportunity to train in Seaman, Airman, Fireman, and Constructionman ratings, E-1 through E-3. They also have the opportunity to study Naval, military and professional subjects. And, those who qualify may study engineering aspects of avionics, nuclear, and conventional shipboard propulsion plants.

The new Oceana division of cadets, who are sponsored by the Navy League of the United States, and co-sponsored by the Naval Air Station Oceana, drill at the NAS Oceana Youth Center, Camp Pendleton at 7 p.m. each Wednesday.

The NSCC training program orients cadets to Navy life, and demonstrates the opportunities available in a Naval career. For further information on the Oceana Division,

Beach Cancer Unit selects March 8 as Daffodil Day

The Virginia Beach Unit of the American Cancer Society has selected March 8 for its annual Daffodil Day.

Volunteers will be bringing this first spring flower of hope to the residents of the Virginia Beach Unit as a major fund raising effort that signifies the start of the local Cancer Crusade. Donations collected from the flower sale will be used for cancer research, education and service.

Thousands of beautiful daffodils from the State of Washington will be shipped to Virginia Beach for the Daffodil Day. The daffodil was selected because it is one of the first flowers of spring and represents a symbol of hope for cancer patients. Businesses and employers will be encouraged to make advance orders for distribution to their employees or as gifts to hospitals, nursing homes or homes for the aged.

The trip was concluded with a night flight back on January 2. All were back in school on the third anxiously looking forward to putting a little of what they had learned in the upcoming spring program West Side Story.

Students participating in the New York Adventure were: Rhonda Knott, Tiffany Thorne, Donna Garrison, Pamela Thompson, Laura Rosen, Kelly Thomas, David Lowenthal, Jimmie Lindeman, Steven Glenn, Lohr Brooks, Lora Matthews, Anna Hatfield, Donna Neister and Michelle Reynolds.

There's a Monster in Great Bridge!

The monster... the Great Bridge bridge... will be defeated. The by-pass dealt the monster a considerable blow, but it continued to exist. Well, enough is enough.

In mid-February Chesapeake Bank & Trust, your good neighbor full service bank, will open a new office in Great Bridge.

The new location, 601 Battlefield Blvd., S., plus the existing main office, 672 Battlefield Blvd., N., will allow you to do all your banking without giving the monster a second thought.

Boy Scouts hold award dinner

The Tidewater Council-Boy Scouts of America launched ticket sales today for its first Distinguished Citizens Award Dinner, which will be held Monday, April 2 at Omni International Hotel.

Roy Charles, who has been active in community affairs for many years, will be the recipient of the Colgate Darden Award, representing outstanding service to the Boy Scout movement.

"We wanted to sponsor an event that would promote the Boy Scout organizations in Tidewater, and at the same time, honor a distinguished citizen in the name of Colgate Darden, who believed that scouting does more to develop personal growth, character, citizenship, physical fitness and leadership of our youth than anything else," said Fred Glanville, chairman of the event. Glanville is president of Chesapeake's Tidewater Steel Corp.

Former U.S. Senator of Virginia, Harry F. Byrd, Jr., will be the featured speaker of the evening, and other prominent citizens have been named honorary chairmen of the event. They include Frank Batten, president of Landmark Communications; Dan Duncan, consultant with Virginia Chemicals, Inc.; Judge William Hodges of Chesapeake; Henry Clay Hofheimer of Norfolk; Sidney Kellam of Virginia Beach; Sam Liles, president of Tidewater Construction Co.; and John L. Roper, III, president and chief executive officer of Norshipco.

Tickets for the dinner can be purchased for $100 per person by calling Jack Terwilliger at 622-1801; Sidney Askew, 622-0731; Ed Nagourney, 422-4141; Edward (Mooh) Kosjer, 628-2020; or Evan Hendrickson, 853-4290.

The Lighter Side

Is Cupid old-fashioned? Not by a long shot!

The cherub archer of turn-of-the-century greeting cards (left) is an inspiration for an American Greetings 1984 valentine (right). "Sentimental valentines are right for communicating emotions that we think of as dating back to the beginning of time," says Mary Ann Corrigan, product manager for American Greetings valentine card line. "They let people express feelings that they might not be able to say in person."

For example, the versing in the 1984 valentine is,

"Cupid, with his magic darts, Plants sweet thoughts in willing hearts-Thoughts of love and happy sharing, New togetherness and caring."

Old-fashioned greeting cards from 100 years ago seldom carried a verse.

American Greetings research shows that men usually select the most extravagant valentines, choosing cards with traditional artwork and romantic versing.

Room Temperture Eggs Make Best Meringue

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Medicine Bottles, Cleaning - If the bottle is stained, put in a tablespoon of white vinegar, more if it's a big bottle, then add a teaspoonful of raw rice. Shake it vigorously for a few seconds, wait five minutes, shake hard again, then rinse in cold water.

Medicine Stains, Removing - Most medicine stains will come out if rubbed with alcohol.

Note: If it is an old stain, soak it in alcohol for twenty minutes, then wash in cold, soapy water.

Meringue, Preventing Shrinking - When you spread the meringue on your pie, make sure it touches every bit of the side. The crust will prevent it from shrinking.

Note: Never bake meringue in a hot oven. A moderate oven gives the best results.

Also, to make the best meringue, do not use cold eggs. Let the egg whites sit at room temperature for fifteen minutes before beating them.

Mice, Getting Rid Of - They hate the smell of camphor.

Crush up a box of mothballs and sprinkle in your drawers, trunks, and cupboards. If cheese isn't attracting mice to your mouse traps, try pumpkin seeds or a soft piece of bread smeared with peanut butter.

Mildew On Linen, Removing - Make a paste of two teaspoons of warm white vinegar, two teaspoons powdered detergent, and one teaspoon crushed white chalk. Rub well into the mildewed area, let it dry, then wash in the usual way. More detergent can be added if the paste is too moist. Rinse well, then dry in sunlight.

Or wet the mildewed spot with pure lemon juice, then sprinkle it with household salt. Rub the salt onto the area, then hang it out in the sun to dry. Brush off the salt with soft cloth after the item has dried.

Mildew On Tiles, Removing - Make a paste of one cup baking soda with enough bleach to make a thick paste. Apply it to the mildewed area, rub it in, then leave it for at least six hours. Rinse off with clear, cold water, dry, then wipe it with a soft cloth dampened with ammonia.

Milk And Cream, Preventing Souring - Add a pinch of bicarbonate of soda and give it a good shake.

Mild And Cream Stains, Removing - Never use hot water to remove milk or cream stains. Wash the material in cold water, then wash again in cold water and detergent. A final rinse in clear, cold water finishes the task.

Milk Pudding, Baking - Always place the pudding dish in a dish of water in the oven to prevent it from boiling over or burning.

Mini banana pancakes

Mini Banana Pancakes are an easy treat for breakfast or brunch. They're sweetened with ripe bananas.

Sunny or gray outside, it doesn't matter - the pancake urge can strike anytime! Next time it grabs you, give Mini Banana Pancakes a try. They're sweetened with ripe bananas.

Pancake batter is so simple, all you do is measure and mix. The bananas are easily whisked to a smooth consistency in the blender.

Top your stack of pancakes with sliced bananas and some maple syrup.

Virginia Philharmonic

Acclaimed trumpeter to appear at Chrysler

A trumpeter who has been acclaimed as "a virtuoso" by The New York Times and "better than a virtuoso" by Le Figaro will appear with The Virginia Philharmonic in its concerts on February 10 and 11 at 8:30 p.m. in Norfolk's Chrysler Hall and on February 12 at 3 p.m. at Ogden Hall on the campus of Hampton Institute.

Trumpet player Andre Bernard will join conductor Richard Williams and the orchestra for performances of two works, the Trumpet Concerto of Johann Hummel and the modern French composer Henri Tomasi's Concerto for Trumpet. The program will open with Ravel's La Valse and conclude with Hindemith's Symphonic Metamorphoses on Themes of Carl Maria von Weber.

Bernard is considered one of the foremost players of the trumpet today. First recognized in his native France with the award of First Prize in Performance at the Conservatoire National in 1964, he has also been judged Prize of Honor winner at the Marseilles Competition, First Prize Winner of the Conservatoire National Supérieur of Paris and Laureate in the International Competition for Music at Geneva.

He has performed repeatedly in the concert hall of New York, London, Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Prague, Washington, Rome, Boston, Salzburg, Brussels, Copenhagen, Montreal and Toronto with such renowned ensembles as the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, I Solisti di Zagreb, Dresden State Orchestra, and I Musici. He has also appeared on tour with the Japan Philharmonic.

His recent recording of concertos by Hummel, Albini and Hertel with the English Chamber Orchestra (one of his more than 15 records) was named a Recording of Special Merit by Stereo Review. The magazine called his performance, "Stunning," and went on to say, "Andre Bernard is one of those rare trumpeters whose playing combines brilliance, lyricism and good taste. No matter what he plays, it sounds right."

In the past few seasons, Bernard has expanded his musical range to include conducting. He is principal guest conductor of the New Symphony Orchestra of London and regularly conducts the Bach Collegium of Munich, Camerata of Genoa and Chamber Soloists of London.

Tickets for the Chrysler Hall performance are $7 to $15. Tickets for Ogden Hall are $6 to $11. Tickets are available at all branches of First Virginia Bank or from the Virginia Orchestra Office (623-2310 Southside or 380-0040 Peninsula).

Adjustable-rate mortgages gaining in popularity

Adjustable-rate mortgages, virtually unknown nationwide three years ago, now account for almost half of the home loans being made in the United States, according to a study released by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., or Freddie Mac, as the agency is known.

Among all mortgage lenders surveyed, adjustable loans captured 44 percent when only savings and loan associations were included. By contrast adjustable-rate mortgages captured only 1 percent of the market in 1980.

The Freddie Mac Survey covered loans made by several hundred mortgage lenders during 1983's first six months.

The survey, believed to be the most detailed and comprehensive study ever made of adjustable-rate mortgages, attributed the surge in popularity largely to the prohibitively high interest rates for fixed-rate mortgages, where the amount of the monthly payment remains constant over the life of the loan, adjustable-rate payments vary according to prevailing interest rates.

A key attraction of the adjustable-rate loans, the survey said, is that they allow first time homebuyer to qualify for mortgage loans. That is because initial interest rates are as much as four percentage points below fixed-rate mortgages. Then, once the borrower has qualified, the interest rates and payments are adjusted to market rates, frequently at the end of the first year, the study noted.

Freddie Mac is a quasi-private agency created by Congress in 1970 to provide liquidity to the home-mortgage market. The survey was undertaken to determine how successful mortgage lenders have been in lessening their dependence on traditional fixed-rate loans that dominated the industry in 1981 and 1982, when interest rates remained at precariously high levels.

In general, the study said, adjustable-rate loans "have received a widespread acceptance in the marketplace."

But the survey also noted "there is a great deal of uncertainty and confusion" through out the industry because adjustable-rate loans are so varied and complicated. Variables include how often and how much the rates and payments may be adjusted and what financial index is used to make the adjustment.

But perhaps the greatest variation was in "the incredible number of differences" in the initial interest rates for the adjustable-rate loans, which ranged from a low of 9.5 percent to a high of 13.5 percent, said Freddie Mac senior economist Mike Lea.

The study also pointed out that some lenders are worried that the adjustable-rate mortgages may lead to increased delinquency rates, particularly if there is no ceiling on how much the monthly payments may rise.

Betz named Director

Carole B. Betz has been named executive director of the Virginia Beach Council of the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce.

She succeeds Bill J. Center who was executive vice president of the local council until he assumed the duties of president of the regional chamber. The HRCC was formed by the consolidation of the chambers of Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk and Virginia Beach.

Betz, known locally for her equestrian and tennis interests, joined the local office in 1981 as assistant director of the Neptune Festival. At the time of her appointment she was program manager, handling membership and small business affairs.

In early January she attended the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Institute for Organization Management at the University of Oklahoma.

Thomas R. Schultheis has been named program manager for the council. He is a former high school mathematics teacher and since 1981 held the position of Tidewater Area Director for Young Life, a non-denominational Christian outreach organization.

Also assisting Betz are secretaries Anne Hodgson and Deanna Kelly.

Former business manager in the Beach office, Patricia Furlough, has been transferred to the Norfolk Council offices as assistant to the regional business manager. Clarke Brown, former office manager at the Beach, has also been transferred to Norfolk as Center's executive secretary.

Other regional employees working in the Virginia Beach Council office are Martha McClees, regional development manager; Ruby Jean Uher, communications manager; and Sandi Quillin, publications coordinator.

All regional personnel now headquartered in the five council offices will be located in the Hampton Roads Chamber of Commerce offices once a building is found.

Council ponders streets and highways

When Virginia Beach Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf is asked to alter the city's Master Street and Highway Plan, she'd like to be sure of the consequences of her action.

She isn't, she told City Council at an informal session Monday afternoon.

Apparently she isn't alone. Several Council members agreed that something had to be done about the plan, although they did not all agree that an outside consultant might be the answer.

Oberndorf suggested that an outside consultant or a study by the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission might be the answer. "I'm not comfortable we're doing the right thing," she said. She said she felt uneasy each time Council makes a proposal to alter the plan.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that the staff could look at the priorities and supply Council with the ramifications of the various alternatives.

Oberndorf said that she would like to be able to look at the total plan and know the consequences of any action.

The city is long on road needs and short on money. As a result, some swapping continues to go on as one road takes precedence over another. Virginia Beach Boulevard, for instance has been delayed so that other roads could be improved. Oberndorf wants to know whether when changes such as this are made, she is doing the right thing.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy said the city is falling behind rapidly in its road building. The plan definitely needs to be upgraded, he said. "Whether we need a consultant or not I don't know. We're already bogged down now."

Councilman Robert G.

Jones, said he concurred that the city has a problem of crisis proportions and should have the best data. Jones has suggested a toll road to relieve the city of some of this problem. He said, "You don't have the faintest idea how big your problem is going to be."

McCoy said he would like to get off the toll idea and get on the State Department of Highways and Transportation.

"I'm not for toll roads," Jones said. "I'd like them to drop from heaven." He suggested inviting the State Highway Department to help.

At the formal session later, Jones instructed the City Manager to contact the State Department of Highways and Transportation for guidance in the construction of the Eastern Freeway without resorting to tolls. Jones had previously supported tolls to get the highway constructed.

Vice Mayor Barbara Henley pointed out that the Land Use Plan is tied in with the road plan. Some of the recommended densities may be higher than they should be, she said, because they are based on the availability of roads which have not been constructed and aren't expected to for years. She said maybe the city should go back and scale down the densities.

Planning Director Robert Scott said the Comprehensive Plan and the Master Street and Highway Plan are being considered together and should be ready in 120 days.

McCoy said the question remains—what comes first, the roads or the density?

He said the Comprehensive Plan should be revamped in conjunction with the Street and Highway Plan. "We're going to have growth whether you like it or not," he said.

Henley said a lot of the roads on the highway plan now are just lines, but the Comprehensive Plan considers them as constructed roads.

Jones said his only reservation to Oberndorf's suggestion is the outside consultant. He said it would be helpful to find out what the staff thinks first.

Oberndorf said she was concerned about areas where growth already has occurred as well as new growth areas.

The real way to slow down growth, Councilman John A. Baum said, is to raise taxes.

McCoy added that the city's transportation was "really a mess."

Councilman Harold Heischberger pointed out that Council is sometimes helpless. He said that when the State decided to put in an exchange on First Colonial Road, he and W.H. Kitchen III said it was needed elsewhere, but the State had its way. "Somehow the state is getting information which doesn't jive with what the needs are."

Councilwoman Reba S. McClanahan said that Council can request the State to look at the area in question, Independence Boulevard.

Even if density were reduced, Councilwoman Nancy A. Creech said, the city wouldn't have enough money to supply the roads that are needed now. Raising taxes for the money is not popular, she said, but "where are we going to get the money from?"

The discussion ended with Council settling for a look in a couple of months at a revamped Comprehensive Plan in conjunction with the Master Street and Highway Plan.

Chapter of Friends of Animals, said the ordinance will reduce the number of unwanted cats and dogs of which 25 million are produced annually in the country. She said that 80 percent of the animals which are ultimately euthanized are from free, giveaway litters. At present the pound charges $6.50 for adoptions.

The ordinance allows for a fee not to exceed $50 which will be determined by the city manager. Failure to have the cat or dog spayed or neutered in accord with the contract shall constitute a class 4 misdemeanor.

Muehlenbeck said that participating veterinarians of the South Hampton Roads Veterinary Association have offered to spay and neuter animals adopted from the city pound at a reduced rate.

The ordinance was supported by the ad hoc committee, the Bureau of Animal Control, the Veterinary Association, the SPCA, the National Humane Society and the Virginia Cat Fanciers.

Plans for new Rotary club set

Plans are underway for the organization of a new Rotary Club in the northern area of Virginia Beach by a group of 30 local business and professional men.

Meeting with representatives of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club, they agreed to apply for a charter in Rotary International, worldwide association of more than 20,000 Rotary clubs with over 917,000 members in 157 countries and geographical regions. The new club is to be known as the Rotary Club of Cape Henry.

Rotary is an organization of business and professional men united worldwide, who provide humanitarian services, encourage high ethical standards in all vocations, and help build good will and peace in the world.

Officers elected for the new club were: Daniel D. Dickenson, president; H. B. (Hank) Kellam, Jr., president-elect; C. Wayne Williamson, vice-president; Thomas Celments, secretary; and B. Frank Jones, treasurer. Other directors are: H. Lindsay Reavis, Theodore Adler, William Joseph, and R. Patrick Deans.

Members of the Virginia Beach Rotary Club assisting with the organization of the new club are: Dickenson, Bernard R. MacNamara, Earl Howell, and Richard Swope.

The new Rotary Club will reflect the spirit of friendship and concern for others which characterizes Rotary everywhere. Rotary's motto is "Service Above Self."

By selecting members from recognized business and professions in a community, a Rotary Club becomes a cross-section of its business and professional life.

Regular weekly meetings of the Rotary Club of Cape Henry will be held at Duck-Inn at 7:30 a.m. every Wednesday. After formal admission to Rotary International, its charter will be presented by John Bowen, governor of Rotary District 760, at a special meeting attended by Rotarians from Rotary Clubs in this area.

Theatre auditions

The Little Theatre of Virginia Beach will hold auditions on Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 20 and 21 at 7:30 p.m. for "Romantic Comedy," directed by Kay Burcher.

The comedy is set in the 1980's and concerns a pair of writers, one male, one female. The two meet on the young man's wedding day and they form a writing partnership. What follows are the usual - romantic complications whenever a young man and girl meet, fall in love, lose each other, and finally get together again after various surprising events take place. The cast consists of four women, 20's to 50's and two men about 30.

"Romantic Comedy" will play weekends beginning March 30 through April 14. The theatre is located on 24th Street and Barberton Drive.

Virginia Beach Arts Center

New Paint and local music opens Friday at Arts Center

New Paint, an exhibition of 35 paintings by 17 artists representing three area colleges and one Richmond university, opens Friday, Feb. 17 at 7 p.m. at the Cavalier Hotel Beach Club located at 42nd St. & Atlantic Ave. on the oceanfront in Virginia Beach.

Sponsored through grants from the Cavalier Hotels and the Virginia Beach Arts & Humanities Commission, the opening also features a concert by Norfolk's MCA recording artists, "The Lost Tropics."

Organized and curated by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, New Paint exhibits the work of aspiring artists who, for the most part, have never exhibited work in a major show or exhibition. The show has a dual objective according to Arts Center director, Frederick Schmidt, "We want to show viewers what is happening now, this moment, in art, rather than point to history or tradition. Also, we want to reach out to an audience of all ages by combining music with art. Naturally, the selection of music is organic to the exhibit and just as contemporary. We intend to produce shows of this nature every two years to encourage new artists to continue their creative development."

Artists in the exhibit include: Susanne Arnold, Lorraine Brevig, Andrew Havenhand, Bryan King, Tom Rybak and Chica

Tenney — graduate students from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond; David Brown and Elaine Rogers — recent VCU graduates (Rogers is currently enrolled in graduate school at University of Wisconsin at Madison); Mark Atkins and Sam Sebrén — Old Dominion University undergraduates; Terri Gillis — recent ODU graduate; Christyl Cartwright, Roland Russell and Jay Antol — graduate students in ODU/Norfolk State University program; Lois McPhatter — Norfolk State University undergraduates; Debbie Babin and Bart Teachout — Tidewater Community College.

The "Lost Tropics" is a five-member contemporary rock and roll group formed in Norfolk 13 years ago. Jerry James, bass guitarist, is a former painter and Old Dominion

Lowenthal: from the stage to the schools

Beach PIO serves parents, press, himself

By Greg Costello

In a broad sense, Joseph Lowenthal, Jr.'s job is to extend the vision of Virginia Beach's $124 million public school system, and its 55,000 students.

But it's not always easy.

No matter how understandable sound and progressive a viewpoint is, of how hard school personnel work, there aren't always going to be roses. If a parent, teacher, or an incident befalls a particular child, a school employee, the media and parents begin asking a lot of questions. Emotional questions. Questions that, to answer, require the skills of a man or woman who has been a teacher, a writer of news, and is a parent.

Enter Joe Lowenthal, public information officer, Virginia Beach City Public Schools.

"We're dealing with children and children are an emotional issue," he says. "You're dealing with the most precious resource in the city."

The children are the future and harboring in them are the hopes and dreams of many Virginia Beach parents. Consequently, when something foul or even questionable arises concerning schools or education, the school administration, under the direction of Superintendent E.E. Brickell, responds.

"We're trying to tell the story of the school system," Lowenthal, 49, said. "If something gets in the way, as you have mentioned some of the things that have happened in the past few years from boundary changes to sex crimes or whatever, sure, they're going to happen. Where you find people these things are going to happen. The only thing I can attempt to do is to continue telling the good side."

Joe, like most Virginia Beach residents, prefers to emphasize the positive over the negative. His years as a radio and print newsmen taught him to be honest and accurate. He tries to treat all issues, whether it's the murder of a teacher or a

False Cape Bill falls short-Henley

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Until before the Virginia General Assembly which would extend access to False Cape State Park falls short of recommendations made by the False Cape State Park Task Force, Virginia Beach Vice Mayor Barbara Henley told Council Monday afternoon.

She said that if the bill is passed without the specific limitations and management standards recommended by the Task Force, the law will be tied up in court for a long time with litigation by environmental groups. Henley was a member of the Task Force.

The bill, Senate Bill No. 359 introduced by Senator William T. Parker, Chesapeake, has already passed the Senate and is now in the House Committee on Conservation and Natural Resources.

City Council Monday evening, by a vote of 10-0, adopted a resolution endorsing the incorporation into the bill of the specific limitations and management standards recommended by the Task Force. Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. was absent.

The Park in Virginia Beach is bordered by North Carolina on the South and the U.S. Back Bay Wildlife Refuge on the north. At present, access is available only by foot, by bike and by boat. The bill provides for a public transportation system operated by the Division of Parks and Recreation of Virginia to transport no more than 2,000 persons a day through the Refuge to the Park. Access over the Federal property would have to be secured through a easement.

No mention is made in the bill of the seasonal limitation for bus access recommended by the Task Force from May 15 to Sept. 15. Henley said this is very important for the protection of migratory birds.

She also said that the news articles she had read make the 2000 people a day sounds more like a goal rather than a maximum. She said the figure was set by the Health Department as the maximum number of people that could be handled safely without sewer. She said the people in Sandbridge are very concerned.

Henley produced copies of letters from individuals concerned about the legislation.

Dr. W.J. Price of 333 Pike Circle, a member of Friends of Back Bay, wrote to Del. Owen Pickett, who wrote the original bill similar to the Parker bill that he was "very disappointed in your concept of what the agreement should be, especially in your lack of consideration."

Raise Taxes, Lose Your Job

By Richard A. Viguere

Like dominoes they are beginning to fall. First one state senator, then another, then maybe a governor or two...

In Michigan, two Democrat legislators who had voted for a 38-percent income tax hike were recalled (fired by the voters) in December and replaced by anti-tax Republicans in a special election January 31. Now the GOP has a majority in the state senate for the first time since Watergate.

It was not strictly a Republican victory. Instead, it was a triumph for blue-collar workers fed up with politicians of both parties who think the people are not smart enough to spend their hard-earned money wisely.

The political establishment reacted with disgust to the recall votes. A Michigan Democrat (quoted by columnists Evans and Novak) described the tax revolt as "our people looking for more take-home pay so they can buy more snowmobiles and motor boats." After all, why should working people spend their money on luxuries when they can spend it for the public good, on important projects like busing children across town to go to school?

It is the arrogance of the "limousine liberals"—people who have already made a comfortable life for themselves—that angered Michigan workers enough to unseat the tax-raisers. Governor Jim Blanchard won the 1982 election by promising no tax increases, but shortly after taking office he proposed the largest increase in the state's history. Now signatures are being collected on petitions to throw him out of office, too.

Dan Powers, 25, a worker at a Ford plant, got "madder than hell" when taxes were increased. Even though he had campaigned for the Governor and other liberals, Powers led one of the recall drives. "People in this state and in this district are fed up with taxes," he said, and fed up with Blanchard's "tax and spend philosophy."

In the recent recall campaign and special elections, supporters of the tax hike spent ten times as much money as the tax protesters. But more than 60 percent of the people voted to fire the two pro-tax state senators, and the pro-tax Democrats who tried to succeed there were beaten by more than two-to-one.

Don't count on the political establishment to change its behavior because of events in Michigan. Despite the hemorrhage of Democratic support on the Michigan assembly line, House Speaker "Tip" O'Neill praised Blanchard's tax hike. "Jim, I knew you had the stuff. Keep up the good work," he wrote.

Establishment Republicans are almost as wrong as establishment Democrats. Despite its stake in the outcome, the Michigan Republican Party claimed neutrality in the recall efforts. And former Governor William Milliken, who led George Bush supporters to victory in the state's 1980 Republican primary, supported the tax increase.

As usual, Republican leaders have neglected to seize an opportunity to attract blue-collar Democrats into their party. At the grassroots level, people are getting fed up with big-spending politicians—not just in Michigan, but around the country.

In a special session in Oklahoma two months ago, legislators rejected a massive tax increase proposed by the Governor after mail and telephone calls from constituents ran ten-to-one against his proposal.

If only they would open their eyes, members of the political establishment of both parties would realize that a new populist revolt is on the way. The people are beginning to use initiative and referendum, recall of elected officials, and even write-in votes to express their frustration with the political establishment—to rebel against politicians who represent the interests of the elite while ignoring the concerns of average citizens.

The spirit of the Boston Tea Party lives on, and you ain't seen nuthin' yet.

Dreamers with shovels

By Ray O. Jones

Most people are dreamers. Dreams are important, not necessarily the kind of dreams we have while asleep, but the dreams we have during waking hours. The worthwhile inventions which have blessed the world are the result of dreams and work. Some people dream and work. Others just dream. The dreamers who work are realists. Those who only dream are idealists.

The idealist dreams about how things ought to be, the way he would desire things to be. He dreams great dreams but never feels any urgency to do anything about it. He is quick to talk about his dreams and ambitions. But when the work starts, he is strangely missing.

The realist is one who sees the discrepancy between what is and what could be or should be. The realist is one who works toward idealism. Don't confuse realism and idealism. They go hand in hand, but the realist must get the idealist to face the facts of life. While the idealist dreams of what ought to be done to make a better world, the realist is actively involved in the present, working with concrete specifics of the daily routine tasks.

We need both—the realist and the idealist—the never-ending dream and then the ability to get on with the job that needs doing.

Dreamers with shovels are the realists. They are dreamers with shovels who want only a job that is significant enough to stand in, and a chance to make a start.

The idealists are those who know how to complain and protest, but they lack a shovel.

If you want a better world, a better community, or church, grab a shovel! Let the idealistic dreamer know that the only way to move from where he is to where he ought to be is through work. And only those who are willing to use the shovel have the right to say what ought to be.

Man looking for friend from WWII

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

I'm writing a book that concerns the Eighth Air Force Service Command in England during World War II and am trying to find a former member of that organization who served at Milton Ernest Hall in England during 1944 and 1945. The man is John Heffelman who was a non-commissioned officer under Lt. Col. Clint Traister. Mr. Heffelman's help in clarifying some data would be of help in my historical research.

If any of your Virginia Beach readers know where I might be able to get in touch with him I'd like to hear from them.

Acronyms tie tongues, give information

Have you ever noticed how some highway signs in the Tidewater area appear to direct the unsuspecting motorist to locations in a foreign country, if not an alien planet? After a while the mind ceases to translate and the letters begin to blur: NAVAIRLANT/NARF/NAVETRASUPPLEN/NAVSEACENTLANT/NAVSCOLM NORVA/ NAVSPECWARGRU/CINCLANTFLT.

These tongue-twisters are known as initialisms or acronyms. Acronyms are words made up of the initial letters or syllables of a phrase. They have become increasingly prevalent in our written and, often, spoken language especially since the 1940's New Deal practices of calling government projects and agencies by their initials (TVA, WPA, NRA, etc.). Beginning primarily with scientific and social and political action areas, acronyms are now evident in many subject areas. In some cases, the acronym is how more well known than the phrase it represents:

RADAR (radio detection and ranging)

RAD (radiation absorbed data)
LASER (light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation)

SCUBA (self-contained underwater breathing apparatus)

CARE (Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere)

FLAK (fliegerabwehrkanone), German word for anti-aircraft gun)

Computer science has adopted acronyms as its own:

PASCAL (Philips automatic sequence calculator)

FORTTRAN (Formula translation)

BASIC (Beginner's all-purpose symbolic instruction code or Beginner's algebraic symbolic interpretive computer)

COBOL (Common business-oriented language)

APL (a program language)

EOM (read only memory)

RAM (random access memory)

Off The Record

I hate coyote breath

I'd just as soon live with wild coyotes than exercise regularly. But under the circumstances, I'd better start doing sit-ups or get ready to start choking on prairie dust.

Exercising, notwithstanding, everyone should participate in some type of athletics. This helps keep you in shape. For most working people, sometimes it's hard to find the time to get in a good racquetball game or a couple of sets, much less take the time to work on an organized team. So what do these people do? They sit home at night and drink and bemoan the fact that they are gaining extra inches around the beltline.

I'd just as soon live with wild coyotes than exercise regularly. But under the circumstances, I'd better start doing sit-ups or get ready to start choking on prairie dust.

"Another glass of wine, dear?"

So what? That's the American way. Get that fat paycheck so you can buy that fattening food so you can sit home and be fat, dumb and happy. It's enough to make you howl.

Some people care more about personal appearances than others. Actually, the word for it is vanity. Vain people are those, for example, who wear contact lenses rather than eyeglasses. Vain people are those most likely to worship exercising like Jane Fonda.

Now me, I don't care that I have sunken eyes, big ears and a goose neck. That's why the newer, shorter hairstyles do not interest me. I'd look like Gomer Pyle on leave. But for some reason I do care about carrying the rings of Saturn around my waist. If anyone says anything about my weight, perhaps someone who remembers me when I was thinner, I tell them its attributable to prosperity.

"Good living," I insist, slapping my bowl of jelly.

"Cold beer," is usually the retort.

No matter. Their day will come. But anyway, back to exercising.

Other than the guys on television commercials, the only people exercising are women. And they only exercise if they are on television or if someone is taking pictures of them.

Plenty of men exercise at local spas, however I doubt if they'd relish cameras on them while they were sweating like pigs at a barbecue. By the way, how come the women are never swimming on the Richard Simmons commercials? And if he's supposed to be an example of what exercising can do for you, give you curly hair, a high voice and an appetite for old women, call me a stagecoach. I hate coyote breath.

"Everything that has happened in my six years here has, in its own way, been difficult to deal with," he said. "I have a position I've maintained all along: Be as open as you possibly can and when you're wrong, you've got a problem, there's no sense in trying to hide it."

That's kinda been Joe's philosophy all along. Do the best you can and be proud of it.

Starry-Eyed

The son of Norfolk newspaper printer Herman Joseph Lowenthal, at the age of five, JoJo, as he was nicknamed, began stage performing. His mother, Hanna, is deceased.

"I was a good elf, as little as I am," Joe laughed, proud of the fact that he's only 5'6".

Joe's parents encouraged his involvement with children's theatre, and soon he found himself performing in Norfolk variety shows and in U.S. Bond Shows. He was emceed by the age of seven. At the age of 13 he was the guest of radio talk shows and in the same year, hosted a 15-minute summer replacement radio program. It was 1947.

"I really didn't want to go to New York and pound the streets and take a chance. I found out very early in life that I didn't like to take too many chances. I'm a pretty conservative person really."

Lowenthal

Joe's confidence grew rapidly and he soon began tinkering with radio copy, such as public service announcements, that he was supposed to read over the air. This is a practice he repeated later in life with wire service news reports.

"I hated the script so badly I started ad-libbing," he remembers, "and from the time we started the ad-libbing, the show got better."

In retrospect, Joe admits he was "starry-eyed" and a pretty good child actor.

Following graduation from Maury High School in 1951, Joe enrolled in the Richmond Professional Institute of the College of William and Mary, now Virginia Commonwealth University. He continued his theatrical endeavors, enlarging the scope to include stage production and design and house management. He received his degree in drama, with a concentration in English, speech, and drama, and had also taken the required education courses allowing him to teach.

Joe decided initially in his senior year that he wanted to pursue a directing career.

"During my senior I made up my mind," he said. "I was taking a directing class at the time and decided that's what I wanted to do. I wanted to be a director. I wanted to teach and be a director."

As fortune would have it, Joe was offered a teaching job which included directing at a new high school in Virginia Beach. He thought twice about New York.

"I really didn't want to go to New York and pound the streets and take a chance," Joe said. "I found out very early in life that I didn't like to take too many chances. I'm a pretty conservative person really."

He graduated from college in 1955 and had a job teaching speech and dramatics waiting for him at the brand new Princess Anne High School, located in what was then Princess Anne County. The school eventually featured a nice gymnasium and a 1,000-seat theatre.

"It was great. I had a chance to start something on my own in drama."

Joe lived with his family in Norfolk and commuted to work for two years. During this time he produced and directed a madrigal show for a local Ruritan Club, and met the right people who would help him along in his professional career.

Joe's life was interrupted by a call to arms as he, in fear of being drafted, enlisted in the Army. He was about to be discharged after two years as a corporal, in charge of pencil pushing, when he was "sweet-talked" by the Army into staying in for an extra year to serve in its cloak and dagger Counter Intelligence Corps (CIC). He was stationed in Richmond, and for the first time in his life, his job called upon specific writing skills.

"It probably did more to convert me to a writer than anything else because we did an awful lot of, of course, background investigation and interviews with people who had applied for security clearance."

While still in the CIC and performing at the Virginia Museum theatre in Richmond, Joe met his wife Louise, who was an actress. She was also teaching at the time in Henrico County. They now have three children.

Following the Army, Joe taught for two years in a brand new Richmond school and worked part-time for WRVA, a leading state radio station based at the Capitol. As an announcer, Joe aired a 15-minute news report, compiled from local and wire service reports.

"Casting no aspirations on my friends at United Press International, I didn't always like their style of writing. I found that some things I

"We're trying to tell the story of the school system. Where you find people these things are going to happen. The only thing I can attempt to do is to continue telling the good side." - Lowenthal rewrote I could read better on the air. I wrote more and more."

In 1962 Joe quit teaching to work in radio full-time. His office was located directly across from the state capitol and he had direct telephone lines to the governor's office. He conducted many live broadcasts on the hottest issues of the day. But he began like any other news reporter on the beat.

"The first time I walked into the General Assembly I didn't even know where the men's room was. But you learned very quickly."

In 1964 Joe covered the Virginia delegation to Atlantic City for the Democratic National Convention. His work was carried by both ABC television and radio.

"I slept one and a-half hours every night. It was great. I loved every minute of it. I think it was the best time I ever had in my life."

Four or five months later, Virginia Beach patriarch Sidney Kellam telephoned Joe to offer him a job on his newspaper. Joe knew nothing about working in the print media but accepted the position. He felt his work at the radio station had been accomplished and welcomed a new challenge.

"I didn't know anything about his newspaper. I didn't know anything about any newspapers. The only thing I knew how to do with a newspaper was how to read it."

He began at The Virginia Beach Sun, Virginia Beach's 57-year-old community newspaper, in March, 1965. He and Louise already had one daughter, Joanna, now 21, and were expecting Carolyn, now 18. They also have a son, David, 16. Joe spent five years at the newspaper, leaving in 1970, to take a news job at WGH radio for three years after which time he opened a news department at WCMS.

In the spring of 1978, John Holgate, then the public information officer for Virginia Beach public schools called Joe to ask if he would consider succeeding him at the position. Holgate said the decision to call him was based on discussions with Brickell. Lowenthal had come to know Brickell better than ever while working at "The Sun" when Kellam sold to Starly Publications, Inc. in the early 1970's. It was while Joe was at The Sun that Brickell in 1968 became superintendent.

Joe, already familiar with the school system and its administrators, accepted the position. He already said goodbye to theatre in 1966 when he directed his last play at the old Cavalier Dinner Theatre in Norfolk.

Joe remembers one of the first things Brickell said to him about the job.

"He said, 'you know, this is a low profile job you're coming into.' And I assured him then as I can surely assure everyone now, my ego has been soothed. I don't feel I need to be a man outfront in the limelight at all. I prefer not to be."

Joe is very happy in his job, resting comfortably with a master's degree in education which he received in 1982. He says public relations was probably his chosen field all along but he never knew it.

"If you added up all the experience I've had I think this is what I've been aiming for all the time and didn't know it," he said, noting that he has experience in teaching and with the media, plus he has many contacts and is a parent.

Joe is not the school system's spokesman. He accommodates the press by directing them to the proper authority for specific questions.

"I've made it my business in the six years to try to learn as much about this school system and its operation as I can so that I know who to refer the press to."

Nevertheless, his name appears in print and he continues to find himself before the cameras, sometimes because the media and he both happen to be in the same place at the same time trying to obtain information.

"Yes, I'll make comments but I really don't like doing it," Joe said, noting also that sometimes school officials don't want to talk to the press.

Not So Gloomy

Joe doesn't think the education picture across America is as gloomy as it's painted.

"School systems are doing what they perceive the public wants done. And when the public changes its mind, education has been slow to adapt. That may be the big problem."

Virginia Beach's educational system, particularly its curriculum, is in fine shape Joe says, but admits there is an overcrowding problem and new schools have to be built.

Personally, Joe would favor a tax hike to support education and frankly doesn't know from where increased education funding will come.

"Things are tough, and they are going to continue to be tough," according to what Joe's colleagues say. "Schools cost money. You get a light bill at home. We get them at the schools. It's going to continue to cost us money, and money's going to continue to be a key issue."

"I would have preferred a penny added to the sales tax if that had been the way it went through the General Assembly. It didn't go that way and to me that's the most equitable way to share the burden."

Asked about the repeatedly defeated proposed lottery bills, Joe said he had some philosophic differences with that idea.

There is nothing about the job Joe doesn't like, although he does get frustrated when an isolated negative event takes precedence over the more positive aspects of the system.

"I can't think of anything offhand, except maybe the time that the Beacon gave us something like eight pages on a drug bust that netted three disorderly arrests."

Although most of the time there is usually clarity between education and politics, the two are mixed when it comes to funding.

"Politics is certainly a part of it. It's big money. You're talking about this year a budget of $125 million. It takes some doing to get that kind of money."

"Politics is certainly a part of it. There's no way you're going to get it without politics. Now, it depends upon your conception of politics, I suppose. Are we using it as a dirty work or not? I'm not. Lobbying is probably one of the better known ways that anybody gets anything."

Lowenthal answers only to Brickell. He has a yearly contract which "isn't worth the paper it's written on," Joe says if Brickell should become displeased with his service.

The school system's operating budget this year is $124,968,425.

Sponsored by Beach Bar Association

Court Docent program in its sixth year

The Virginia Beach Court Docent Program, sponsored by the Virginia Beach Bar Association and endorsed by the Judiciary, the Mayor and the Superintendent of Schools, is in its sixth year of service to the community.

The first "Day in Court" was conducted for a 12th grade government class in October 1978 after many months of preparation. The initial year the goal of the program was to secure 19 court days or one per week and to educate 575 students in the criminal and civil justice system. The following year, additional days were added so that one day a week was available for 6th grade students.

When Mrs. Ann-Meade Simpson, who has held the position of program director since the inception of the program, stepped down during a recent training meeting, she said she "looked back over the past years with pride in the progress which the Program has made." On this occasion, the Judges of the Circuit Court prepared a Resolution recognizing her service, stating, "her planning, direction, leadership and guidance have made the Virginia Beach Court Docent program an outstanding success in this city, and a model for similar programs throughout the state and beyond."

The program has grown and improved each year. During the present school year, approximately 5,000 students will participate during the 100 Court Days which are available. The program provides Docents (teaching guides) three days a week. All of these docents are volunteers. Most are wives of attorneys or former teachers. Many are members of the Junior League. All attend training sessions and then serve a kind of "internship" with an experienced docent.

On a typical "Day in Court", the 12th grade government students arrive just after 9 a.m. and meet in the "Ceremonial Courtroom", Number One, for an orientation period. During this time, the two docents on duty explain the schedule for the day, discuss the judicial system and explain the role of each officer of the court—the judge, attorneys, bailiff, clerk of the court, court reporter, jury etc. They discuss the process of jury selection if time permits.

Some docents present a mock trial in which the students sit in the seats of the officers of the court. Following the orientation, the students visit the General District Court and later the Circuit Court. They bring their lunch and on nice days eat in the courtyard. After lunch, the group tours the Correctional Facility and learns its role in the judicial process.

Sixth graders, also

The sixth grade students follow a similar schedule except that they have an additional presentation in the afternoon in the Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court, which is not in session. Following a talk by one of the Juvenile Judges, they hear from a representative of the Court Service Unit. During the question and answer period, the students learn about laws which affect them, especially laws concerning bicycles and mopeds.

By the end of the day, the students have seen real life drama. They have experienced what it would be like to be "inside" the jail. They have learned about their rights, as well as responsibilities of citizenship. They have learned about career opportunities. They have learned some of their rights should they become involved with the law. Juvenile offenders have the right to remain silent, to have a lawyer, to have a private hearing, unless they are tried as an adult.

In assessing the success of the program, the teacher evaluation forms and student comments provide insight into its effectiveness. Based on schools and from 18 elementary school teachers this past fall, the program receives high marks. Teachers who have participated in previous years comment that the program has improved and is well rounded. One wrote recently, "We can't thank you enough for being our docents. We thoroughly enjoyed the entire day. We have talked about it so much that the next group from our school can hardly wait!"

The students report that they are most impressed that the judges recognize their classes and speak to them. The older students express the most interest in cases in the Circuit Court while the sixth graders say they are impressed by the jail tour. The younger students say that the time in the Juvenile Court is most educational and a valuable experience. Excerpts from letters received say, "Thank you for giving us a tour of the court system. We really enjoyed hearing the court trials. We learned a lot about the laws and who has to abide by them. Thank you for inviting us over to see some real cases and courts. I thought I'd never get to see a real case except on People's Court." And, "I liked the part when I was the prosecutor and my teacher was the Judge!"

The new Program Director is Mrs. Lillian Youell. The coordinators of docent training are Mrs. Betty Dickerson and Mrs. Jeanne Evans. Mrs. Georgia Dinsmore and Mrs. Pat Mills serve as coordinators of docent scheduling. The coordinator of public relations is Mrs. Rene Swartz and Mrs. Penny Dinsmore is the secretary-treasurer. Anyone interested in becoming a docent should get in touch with a member of the Coordinating Committee.

Malibu students love Reading Month

Governor Robb designated the month of December as reading month. Malibu Elementary held a balloon launch the first of the month hoping the funder of the balloons would be encouraged to read the messages within each balloon.

Each week thereafter an outstanding reader was chosen from each class. At the conclusion of the reading month students were selected to read for a school assembly of students, parents and judges. They were judged in two categories: Prose or Poetry. Their presentation was judged on quality, tone of voice, diction, eye contact with the audience and stage presence. Mrs. Ruth Bridges, Mrs. Florence Chandler, elementary supervisors and Mrs. Carolyn Long, librarian listened carefully to each of the eighteen contestants before making their final decision.

As votes were being tallied Mr. J. Prine, principal, reminded the students that Mrs. Rhonda Skaggs, assistant principal would be going to Kingston Elementary for her second assigned school this year. He praised Mrs. Skaggs for her efforts in the reading contest. He said, "Mrs. Skaggs has sponsored many such programs at Malibu having the children go on to compete on city and state level, resulting in several winners from our school." Mrs. Skaggs has been at Malibu for three years and has kept the students informed in the learning skills contests. Mrs. Skaggs said, "I will miss Malibu but plan to keep in touch making sure students stay involved in these very worth while events."

The program was brought to a close by the announcements of the reading contest winners:

In the category of prose: first place, Jennifer Wadiak; second place, Laura Sandford and Jenny Dominey; third place, Laura Pfeiffer.

In the category of poetry: first place Jennifer Mills; second place, Andrea Salisbury; third place, Susan Callahan. Student received plaques for first place and ribbons for second and third. Other contestants in contest: Krista Gillispie, Richard Goerner, Gwynn Atkins, George Neta, Shannon Aydielle, Regina Silver, John Johnson, Joe Shochet, Lori Finkbeiner, Christine Pentress, and Brian Butler.

Oceana Auxiliary office in full swing

By Virginia M. Browning
The Oceana Auxiliary of the Navy Relief Society started the new year with their separation from the Hampton Roads Auxiliary. While functioning as an autonomous unit the Oceana Auxiliary will retain responsibility for the Dam Neck office, which is open on Tuesdays and Thursdays only. The Oceana office is open weekdays 9-1 p.m.

In 1983 the two offices increased their amount of activity by 31% over the previous year, with a growth pattern expected to continue. During the past year a total of 2,893 interviews were conducted and $251,600 provided as gratuities or interest-free loans to service personnel and their dependents. Linda Olds, Executive Director of Oceana Navy Relief points out that due to the increased work load recent expansion of the spaces was necessary before the separation was authorized by the Navy Relief Washington Headquarters.

Now, says the director, with the expansion complete, the auxiliary can offer more confidentiality due to enclosed interviewing rooms, can process clients more efficiently and quickly because of additional spaces and increased staffing, and the offices are now more pleasant for clients and workers.

Captain C. L. Tinker, Commanding Officer of NAS Oceana, and Captain A. E. Purdham, Senior Chaplain, have been instrumental in establishing the auxiliary and will serve as president and vice-president, respectively. Activities of the Oceana Auxiliary will be governed by an advisory board.

During the dedication ceremonies for the new auxiliary, Captain Tinker acknowledged the men of Construction Battalion 415 (CBBU-415) for their work in constructing the new facility. "As usual, the Seabees have done yeoman service to provide a top-notch, quality establishment." The Skipper also gave a word of thanks to Captain C. E. LeMasters and Captain Glenn Smith, "who have both been a very important part of establishing the new auxiliary." After the commanding officer's speech, Linda Olds gave a special "thank you" to Mrs. Betty Burton, Executive Director of the Hampton Roads Auxiliary. "Without Betty Burton's courage, we would never have gotten this auxiliary," Mrs. Olds stated. "Not only did she get us started, she provides ongoing support."

City Council discusses proposed False Cape Bill

ation for your Sandbridge constituents. In essence, your committee has discarded all the task force recommendations, and turned a long a tedious negotiation into an exercise in futility. One of the major motivations of the members of the task force was the sense that the state cared about the various groups involved and was just as interested in a sensible solution as the various groups represented were. This is obviously not the case.

"I am especially concerned that the agreement is not contingent upon no increase in permit holders, also that there is not enough emphasis on the prohibition of through access to and from North Carolina."

The agreement referred to in the bill pertains to an agreement between the state and federal governments to allow access over Back Bay Wildlife Refuge. In reference to access from North Carolina, the bill permits the passage over the access corridor to vehicles whose operators have been issued permits by the Department of the Interior. These individuals own property in North Carolina and the alternate access to Virginia is much longer. However, the bill does not rule out an increase in the permits.

Councilman John Baum said that past history of the area shows a concerned effort by people who bought land on the outer banks and how want to use the park and refuge as access. He also wondered why the state acquired False Cape "without knowing how it was going to get there in the first place."

Price continued that the seasonal limitation on visitors is very important to Sandbridge residents. "The recommendations of the task force were very difficult for this community to reconcile ourselves to and I, in particular, received considerable criticism for my stand on this issue. It appears that my critics were right and the state planned all along to do as it pleased. The people of Virginia would be just as happy with False Cape State Park if usage controls were more stringent and Sandbridge residents and environmental groups would be a lot happier."

In a letter to Dr. Betty

J. Diener, secretary of Commerce and Resources, Amos S. Eno, director of wildlife programs for National Audubon Society, also says that Pickett's draft of the agreement concerning access through Back Bay is "totally unacceptable." He says the draft ignores most of the recommendations of the Task Force, provides no mitigation or compensation to the Fish and Wildlife Service and does not resolve the question of access from North Carolina.

Henley said the recommendations of the Task Force has been on record for well over a year. It supports carefully controlled beach utilization, primitive camping, establishment of environmental educational programs and the continuation of fish and wildlife management.

Some of the things ignored in the proposed bill are:

- Implementing a reservation system to control visitation to False Cape State Park to minimize the impact of vehicular congestion on the Sandbridge community.

- Access is to be provided with the understanding that it is not to facilitate road access to North Carolina or any liberalization of existing permit restrictions.

- Management standards and uses apparently not incorporated in the bill but recommended by the Task Force include:

- Not allowing visitation that would cause significant additional congestion in the Sandbridge area or on the roads leading to Sandbridge.

- Provisions by the state of potable water and sewerage disposal.

- Provision of boardwalks across dune areas.

- Location of the staging area for the transport system north of the access to the Wildlife Refuge.

- Providing adequate fire and rescue facilities.

- Coordinating the development of False Cape State Park with the City of Virginia Beach.

While the Task Force envisioned relatively primitive facilities, the bill provides for "facilities reasonably necessary to accommodate the visitors into False Cape State Park." To Henley, this can mean anything.

David Crochmal, assistant to the city manager, was to deliver the resolution to legislators in Richmond on Tuesday. The bill was discussed at both the formal and informal sessions of Council.

University art instructor. He ventured to New York City with the group in 1979 after playing regularly at several Ghent nightclubs. They once made sandwiches on stage when they performed at the Chrysler Museum and passed them out to the audience. They were also known in this area for painting dark circles under eyelids, then playing with their eyes closed. Their music is driving pop that offers smart references to such late 60s acts as the Jefferson Airplane and the Kinks. Songwriters Terry Bacon, James and Monica Serra have been reviewed as talents that not only know how to construct a good pop tune, but also how to include enough quirks to keep it interesting.

The change would be made when the striping is changed on Atlantic Avenue on April 1 for the summer season.

Jennings also suggested a review of procedures for Council based on recommendations of the Organization of Municipal Clerks. Robert Scott, city planning director, discussed the Comprehensive Plan update which he said would be ready in preliminary form in 120 days. Acid Rain film shown

The Virginia Beach Audubon Society will show the documentary film "Acid Rain—Requiem or Recovery?" at 8 p.m. Monday, Feb. 20 at 8 p.m. at the A.R.E. Library, Pacific Avenue at 67th Street in Virginia Beach.

This film details the scope of the acid rain problem and analyzes the threats acid rain poses to our water, forest, agricultural, wildlife, and manmade resources. "Requiem or Recovery" is one of three Canadian films labeled in February 1983 as "political propaganda" by the U.S. Department of Justice. One of these "propaganda" films—"If You Love This Planet"—received an Academy Award this year.

According to Diana Close, spokesperson for the Audubon Society, "Acid rain damages cost this country billions of dollars annually. Acid rain not only kills fish in Adirondack lakes, but it also damages crops, rivers, streams forests, and buildings across North America."

This film is open to the public.

Tongue twisters

Some acronyms have a more general application: SOP (standard operating procedure), PDQ (pretty damn quick), ASAP (as soon as possible), SWAK (sealed with a kiss). Some require care as they represent more than one definition:

WASP: White Anglo-Saxon Protestant, World Association of Societies of Pathology, Williams aerial systems platform, Westinghouse advanced systems planning group

NARC: Narcotics (FBI standardized term), National Association of Regional Councils, National Association for Retarded Children

Some make us smile: CROC (Committee for the rejection of obnoxious commercials).

Probably, however, the gold medal for acronym creation should be awarded to the military. Recognize JANAF? (Joint Army Navy air field). These abbreviated words are actually fairly simple and quite versatile. Try this example: CINC=Commander-in-chief, LANT=Atlantic, FLT=fleet, MED=Mediterranean, NAV=Naval forces Thus CINCLANTFLT=Commander-in-chief, Atlantic fleet and CINCNAVEASTLANTMED=Commander-in-chief, Naval forces East Atlantic, Mediterranean. Simple? Of course! Well, try REFRANACDUTRA. That's the Army's way of saying "release from annual active duty for training".

The list is endless. It may make you wish everything was written in BASIC (British-American Scientific International Commercial) English

Mustard paste repairs scatched mirror

Mincer Or Chopper, Cleaning - If your mincer or chopper is greasy after mincing fatty meat, remove most of the grease by mincing two slices of bread (not too fresh) through the machine. Now, wash it thoroughly in hot, sudsy water and rinse.

Mirror Cleaner, Making Your Own - Mix together two quarts of warm water, two tablespoons of kerosene and one teaspoon of powdered borax. Rub on with soft cloth moistened with the liquid.

Mirrors, Cleaning - Black and white newspaper is very good for cleaning mirrors. Soak the first piece of newspaper in cold water, squeeze it into a ball and clean, then polish with a second piece of newspaper, also squeezed into a ball.

Or make a paste of whitening and alcohol. Smear the mirror with the paste, using a cloth or gauze, then quickly rub the mixture off before the alcohol evaporates. Polish with a soft cloth.

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Mirrors, Repairing Scratches - Make a paste of dry mustard with a little white vinegar. Apply the paste to the scratch with the end of your finger and gently rub until the scratch disappears.

Mites On Outdoor Plants - To get rid of mites, mix half a cup of buttermilk and four cups of wheat flour in four gallons of cold water. Spray it directly onto the leaves of your outdoor or ornamental plants.

Note: If your plants' leaves are turning yellow or twisting, mites are usually the cause.

Molasses, Syrup, Preventing Sticking - If you have to use these in a measuring cup, glass, or spoon, prevent sticking by wetting the inside of the utensil before using it.

Or lightly grease the cup, glass, or spoon with butter.

Moles, Getting Rid Of - Castor oil beans, dropped down the holes or scattered around the area, are an excellent deterrent.

Using carbide pellets or powder put in the holes and followed by boiling water, is also very effective. After pouring the water, cover the holes with bricks or wood. The gas is deadly to the moles.

Mosquito Bites - Soak a cotton ball in pure ammonia and apply to the bite to relieve pain and itch. Or rub any yellow laundry soap directly onto the bite or itch.

Any good toothpaste rubbed directly onto the spot is also very good, and works in a few seconds.

Savory beef stew ideal winter fare

Stews are naturals for whetting winter appetites as they're savory, hearty and fill the kitchen with delicious aromas while cooking.

An especially tasty version, from the test kitchens of Aunt Nellie's Foods, Midwestern Stew features chunks of beef, seasonings, and a variety of vegetables. Adding already prepared boiled onions near the end of cooking is a flavorful as well as time saving idea. Accompany the stew with hot, crispy French bread or rolls.

MIDWESTERN BEEF STEW

2 tablespoons cooking oil
2 pounds beef for stew, cut in 2-inch chunks
1 tablespoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 bay leaf
2 cups water
1 cup canned beef broth
1 bunch carrots
3-4 small zucchini
1 16 oz. jar Aunt Nellie's small whole onions, drained
3 medium tomatoes
1 tablespoon flour
1/4 cup water

Heat oil in deep pot or Dutch oven. Add beef chunks and quickly brown on all sides. Add salt, pepper and bay leaf. Stir in 2 cups water and beef broth. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer about 1 1/2 hours or until meat is tender. Meanwhile, peel carrots and cut in 2 inch lengths. Cut zucchini in 1 inch slices; quarter tomatoes. Blend flour and 1/4 cup water. After beef has simmered about 1 hour, add carrots. About 15 minutes later add zucchini and continue simmering until meat and vegetable are tender. Add onions, tomatoes and flourwater mixture. Combine gently but thoroughly. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 3 minutes.

Your beauty and health

Perm technology is complicated

When I first started in the beauty field in 1952, I was first taught to wrap heat perms, do double horseshoe parting, apply pads, spacers, cut each curl, and then roll hair on rollers, then take a little tool and twist the hair until the patron said, "Woo - that's enough." The heat perms had to be rolled tight because the hair would expand. Lotion was applied and aluminum with felt buffers placed over the curl and the patron sat under the perm machine. We hooked up the electric heaters on the end of electric wires. While the patron was hooked up we stood there fanning because it would get hot. We also used cold blow dryers to keep the scalp cool. The customer would always joke and say, "What if the building catches on fire?"

Next came the radio wave. The clamps were heated on electric rods and placed on the hair much as before. Then came the chemical pad that generated the heat. It was used with metal clips to hold the pad in place.

When cold waves came in - wow - what a difference. We had to roll the hair with a broom straw laying on the rod to keep it from getting too tight around the rod, in cold perming the hair contracted. If it was rolled too tight, the hair might break.

High Technology had its constant effect on the perms we gave. There were many differences in perms. The perms were formulated to work with different hair texture, porosity, tensile strength, medication, even age. The hair could be normal, coarse, fine, gray, white, tinted, bleached, and frosted. Perm manufacturers formulated the new perms according to research in the Scientific community. Such formulas are cream, cream oil, hair protein, amino acid, nucleic acid, carbonhydrate, spinach, apple, foam, texture, acid, buffered, alkaline, vitamin E, rose, lemon fragrance, vitamin C, vitamins A, C, D, E, also perms, Jeri curl, phacimile, L-Cysteine, olive oil, proto perm, firm and gentle, nice and natural; perm a gray, sanara, technique, 7th dimension, body so lasting, design freedom, duo therm, feels so lively, gentle persuasion, gentle texture, lanolin bath, wave lengths, busy beauty, great feeling, controlled body, guys and dolls perm, milk perm, milk plus perm, snap and body, so natural, protein builder perm, fanci curl, warm velvet, white velvet, ACV cold wave, new image, milk oil, lanolin, infusion perm, uniperm, ultra body, modern form, lustra curl, perfect touch, soft body, lustra silk, gimme curl, kind to color perm, last so long, one better, and this is not even the full list of perms.

This is just part of what your hairdresser has to keep up with. The hairdresser must also know how all of these perms will react in each type of hair. Mind boggling - you guessed it! And you, the customer, have to wear the result for at least three months.

Life style and personal attitudes must guide the hairdresser in how much perm to put in the hair. Some people want a tight ringlet curl. Others want an almost straight perm. Others vary in between. Most perms relax ten to twenty percent in the first couple weeks.

Many people want natural curly heads straightened to varying degrees.

We hairdressers must rely on the product, however, the best product can be ineffective when not properly wrapped, or the product not properly applied. Constant training for methods and product up date has been a necessity. This effort to learn has taken me all over the United States. Friends in the beauty fields have been all over the world learning. This has been a constant source of excitement.

Nurseries are a growing business

Virginia Beach residents wanting to start a nursery, garden center or plant-growing business can learn what is needed to be able to manage such an operation by attending a nursery management workshop next month at the Virginia Truck and Ornamentals Research Station.

The program, which also is aimed at those who are newly involved in the business, will begin at 1 p.m. Monday, Feb. 27, and continue through noon Thursday, March 1. The workshop is being sponsored by the station, the Virginia Cooperative Extension Service and Virginia Tech's department of horticulture.

The subjects that will be included in the program are nursery organization, plant growth and development, plant propagation, container production, field production, greenhouse and bedding plant management and plant selection and marketing. Tours of the station, a local nursery, greenhouses and a garden center also are planned.

The program will be taught by Paul L. Smeal, Tech Extension horticulturist and program organizer; Richard Luckham, Tech Extension economist; Daniel C. Milbocker, station plant physiologist; and Tom Banko, station research horticulturist.

The $65 registration fee includes educational materials and other related materials. Class participation is limited to 25 with a Feb. 14 deadline for registration.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting the adult registrar at the Donaldson Brown Center for Continuing Education, Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Va. 24061 or by calling (703) 961-5182.

Barton to JA chain fund drive

Bill Ambrose, president of the Tidewater Junior Achievement Board of Directors has announced that Thomas A. Barton will chair the 1984 Virginia Beach JA Operating Fund Drive.

When accepting the position, Barton said, "Junior Achievement is an excellent economic education and training program for students."

Having a complete background in Business Management and Administration including a M.B.A., Barton has little difficulty in owning and operating Beach Ford, Inc. Barton also is dedicated to various civic duties including sitting on the Executive Board of the Tidewater Council Boy Scouts of America, acting as youth sports coach for King's Grant Baptist Youth League, and being a member of Civilians of Virginia Beach. Barton's activities even extend to national positions with United Way, the Automobile Dealer's Association, and the Ford Motor Company National Dealer Council.

The operating fund drive will be held from Feb. 23 through March 9 to raise some $11,500 in funds for the fiscal-year's operating budget. Barton will have the responsibility of managing the Virginia Beach campaign effort.

Bill Ambrose, President of the First Virginia Bank of Tidewater, said that one of the major purposes of the JA organization is to present young people with an understanding of the American private enterprise system. In this 65-year-old high school program, Tidewater teenagers actually form and operate miniature corporations. The teenagers capitalize by selling stock at $1 a share. In electing officers, paying wages and salaries, in manufacturing and selling products or services, in reporting to stockholders, and in liquidating at the end of the school year, JA members gain a sound background to general business procedures.

This learn-by-doing program is endorsed by parents, business men and women, and educators across the country.

Beach Chamber action

Century 21 earnings

Century 21 Real Estate has announced that during the fourth quarter, 1983, its market share for residential real estate nationally rose to 11.4%.

During 1983, Century 21 brokers and sales associates participated in approximately 500,000 transactions, totalling over $30 billion.

Outstanding retailer

Bill's Carpet receives recognition

Bill's Carpet, Inc., has been named the 1984 Outstanding Retailer in the country by the National Congress of Floor Covering Associations.

Housing assistant resigns

Virginia Beach Assistant to the City Manager for Housing and Community Development, Benjamin C. Moore, has submitted his letter of resignation to City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck. His resignation is effective May 11, 1984.

Moore has been an employee of the City of Virginia Beach since May, 1978, beginning as the Clean Community Coordinator. In January, 1979, he was hired as the City's Community Development Coordinator, a position which was expanded in May, 1979, to the Assistant to the City Manager for Housing and Community Development.

Since Moore has been with the Community Development Program in Virginia Beach, the Program has grown from a grant totaling $1,560,000 in 1979, to $2,560,000 in 1983. Moore recalled his most significant accomplishments, in working in the area of housing and community development, were the development of a comprehensive plan for the Burton Station area; and, the progress made by incorporating Reidsville and Queen City areas into the Community Development Program.

This award has been presented for the last three years at the Association's LIFE Market (Largest International Floorcovering Exposition) hosted each year by the Chicago Floor Covering Association.

It is granted for excellence in the industry and service within a local floor covering association, and is the only award of its kind in the industry. More than thirty retailers were nominated by their local associations to receive this honor.

Judging was conducted on a numerical basis by members of the floor covering industry press.

The company began in 1960 and currently operates 23 retail stores in Baltimore, Washington and the Tidewater area of Virginia.

"We are tremendously pleased and grateful to have been so distinguished by respected members of the industry," said Mark Helman, president of Bill's. "Our commitment to excellence and customer satisfaction for the past 24 years has been rewarded."

Rose and Krueth Realty gets the accreditation nod

Rose and Krueth Realty Corp. has earned national accreditation from Relocation Resources, Inc. (RRI), a Boston-based employee relocation service.

"Accreditation through Relocation Resources is the real estate equivalent of the "Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval," according to Jim V. Rose, president of 11-year-old Rose and Krueth Realty.

"Each RRI member firm must maintain high relocation service standards and adhere to uniform procedures," Rose explained adding, "Our sales associates have successfully completed a highly specialized RRI training program."

According to Rose, the corporate relocation business has undergone "dramatic growth" over the past decade and is now a vital part of a full-service real estate firm.

Carole Mack is relocation director of Rose and Krueth and has been named RRI Representative and Corporate Coordinator for the area. Mrs. Mack is well-versed in relocation having specialized in the field with companies in Montgomery, Alabama, Mobile, Alabama, and Houston, Texas before joining Rose and Krueth.

"Through our association with Relocation Resources, Rose and Krueth can now offer the very best service to companies large and small, and work directly with the transferee to provide a "personal touch" not commonly found in the complex relocation process," Mrs. Mack said.

Carole Mack, relocation director of Rose and Krueth Realty Corporation has announced her firm's affiliation with TRANSLO (Translo Location Corporation), a world-wide referral network of independent Realtors, specializing in fine residential properties.

According to Mrs. Mack, TRANSLO members represent more than 1,000 real estate offices, with over 12,000 sales associates, in 3,500 metropolitan-residential communities in the United States and Canada. "TRANSLO is recognized within the real estate industry as an outstanding referral and relocation organization," she said. "Our affiliation with TRANSLO will enable us to better serve home sellers here by working with an increased number of transferees seeking to purchase homes in our city."

TRANSLO, with corporate headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia, selects new member firms strictly open quality within an individual residential market area. TRANSLO President, Kenneth E. Capelle, commented, "Our greatest strength is the reliability of our member firms. We are proud to welcome Rose and Krueth Realty Corporation and are confident their association with our network will prove invaluable."

Refuge in place for battered women and children

By Lin J. Cooper

The woman waited for her husband to turn on the shower, then she hastily swept up her seven-year-old daughter and fled out the door. As the car pulled away from the $75,000 home, the throbbing bruises on her arms and face painfully reminded her of what had happened.

Her husband had become angry after coming home from work and finding supper was not ready. She had told him the meal would be ready soon as she nervously fluttered from the refrigerator to the stove. But her nervous excuse only increased his rage. His voice heightened to a thunder. Then came the wrenching blows.

He had somehow wrestled her to the floor. She raised her arms to protect her face, but that seemed to provoke a flurry of even harder blows.

The child, crouched at the foyer stairway, hid behind a wall. She could not see what was happening, but she heard the arguing, the struggle and the cries of pain.

This case, although created for illustrative purposes, is similar to the scenes some Virginia Beach families are experiencing in their homes, says Candice Constantinides, director of the Women-in-Crisis Center, located in Norfolk. The shelter provides temporary lodging to battered women and their children. The center that opened May, 1983, has served mostly Virginia Beach and Norfolk residents. It also serves Chesapeake, Portsmouth and Suffolk.

The Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) owns and operates the center. The street address of the two-story house is kept secret to insure the confidentiality and safety of the victims of family violence.

Constantinides says the shelter is not the solution to the problem, but it does provide sanctuary and counseling in a crisis situation.

Witnessing violence in the home is also traumatic for the children, says Constantinides. The children's problems are compounded when they are taken away from home and friends to unfamiliar surroundings, like the crisis center. She says this contributes to the need for a play area where children can "act out" their feelings.

An old two-car detached garage is now being renovated by the Tidewater Builders Association to provide a play center for the children at the shelter. Contributions for the $10,000 project have been collected from association members.

The renovation is being done by the TBA Manpower Training Department in cooperation with the City of Virginia Beach. Construction began in December and is scheduled for completion by the Feb. 9 ribbon cutting at the center.

Constantinides says the new center will help alleviate the often crowded conditions at the shelter. In eight months, the center provided shelter for 129 women and 196 children. The victims come from a broad socio-economic spectrum, she says.

Some 20 children and 10 adults have been packed in the nine-bedroom, two-story house at one time. "At first we thought of the children's center as an ideal. However, as the center became more and more crowded, it became critically important," she comments.

The interior of the home has already been damaged due to the cramped conditions. "When there are so many bodies in such a small area, there is just nowhere for the children to go. They don't mean to be destructive, but they just don't have enough room. Everyone gets cabin fever," she explains.

The renovation will include installing a bathroom, a low storage area for toys, indoor sandbox, laundry room, vinyl flooring, insulation and heating, fluorescent lighting and a one-way window to allow professionals to watch the children at play. The TBA Auxiliary has also donated a washing machine and toys for the center.

Nancy Clark of Clark-Whitehill Company, who was instrumental in securing contributions for the center, commented, "It was rewarding for me to contact our members and not have a single one turn me down. We often received even more than we asked for. It has been a good year for the building industry, and everyone feels that we should give something back to the community."

In addition to the women and children, a group of economically disadvantaged young persons will also benefit from the play center. A pre-apprenticeship class of ten unskilled young people from low-income families will receive on-the-job training as they renovate the home. The TBA Manpower Training Department under joint contract with the city of Virginia Beach has recruited and is training these students in the building trades. After they have completed the six-month course, they may opt to start their own business or will be placed in a job with an established contractor.

"We selected this project because it would provide a broad training experience for the students and because of the important service the crisis center facility offers to all the Tidewater cities," said Benjamin Moore, assistant to the city manager for housing and community development. "We were glad to be able to cooperate and get this work done at minimum cost by using the trainees. The project has many benefits."

TBA Manpower director Ray Rudolph says the project has provided an opportunity for the students to learn a variety of skills. "They have had to wire the electricity, install plumbing, heating, lighting and drywall, drop the ceiling and build new cabinets. This project has given them experience at a little bit of everything," said Rudolph.

Constantinides has been pleased with the students' work. "The students have been great. They have respected the privacy of the shelter and have gone beyond the call of duty," she said, noting the students volunteered to help move a refrigerator and do needed lawn work at the center. "They have been very professional in their work and conduct. Their instructor Al Paganini, has been wonderful." The renovation is the first project undertaken by the newly created Tidewater Builders Association public service fund. The fund is used for charitable community projects in Chesapeake, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk and Virginia Beach.

Kline sales professionals are among the best in the entire automotive industry. Their product knowledge is unequalled. Their sincere concern for Kline customers is uncompromising. And their positive attitudes about their profession are obvious.

So, just being a member of the Kline sales team is an achievement in itself. But to excel and be a Kline Professional Sales Leader is a special honor.

These Kline Professional Sales Leaders led their associates to another record breaking sales year for Kline Chevrolet in continuing our pace as one of the fastest growing new car dealerships in America. And each of the five has received the national recognition of Chevrolet National Legion of Leaders and Truck Sales Honor Club, in addition to being a Kline Professional Sales Leader.

When you have a first class sales organization, you're going to be proud. But it's especially pleasing to recognize the top of the class.

Computers

Computer people talk about now being a transition period.

Older people who have never used computers and have lived their life with relative ease, will see no need to now acquire one. Middle-aged people are vulnerable to the computer craze and their computer interest will vacillate.

People 35 and below will eventually get involved with computers because their children will. Then the onus falls on parents to become somewhat "computer literate." Or does it? The schools will, as some already are, teach students basic computer skills.

The need for computers will not necessarily be defined by societal demands, but by professional ones. In the future, computers will find themselves a bigger part of the business world, more so than in the home.

At least for now computers are harmless. Forget about the movie "2001." They should be viewed as tools to be used by people who like to be organized, efficient and neat. Making a computer work at its maximum capacity to meet your desired goals will take some study. It's all a matter of personal motivation.

Council race

Some of the luster of serving on City Council may be fading. Consider the fact that compared to two years ago there are only a handful of candidates for this spring's councilmanic election.

Serving on council can be a trying experience, its members say. They cite long hours, phone calls, a relentless demand for public appearances. This type of stuff is fun for a while, but not all the time. So why do council members continue to serve? Although there are no clear cut answers maybe...

It's human nature to try to help those in need. This includes people, cities, states and nations. Holding a publicly elected political office allows a person to touch, in varying degrees, each of these areas.

More specifically, many local residents feel that this city needs guidance and direction. Virginia Beach is a pup of a city, only 20 years old, and has yet to realize its ultimate professional image and public needs. There are those who say that the military interest in Tidewater may weaken, leaving Virginia Beach more dependent than ever on tourism. Then there are those who say that for tourism to remain strong in Virginia Beach, the beach must be gussied up and gambling legalized. This would allow Virginia Beach to more vigorously compete with Atlantic City and Myrtle Beach. There are also ideas about lotteries in the air and a Norfolk-Virginia Beach light rail transit system. But who has time to work on these things when the city must occupy itself with water and road problems, plus any and all other in-city politics and concerns which go on week to week?

The public cannot accept less than the best available candidates for public office. That is, if the public stays smart. Virginia Beach must have the most intelligent, analytical and influential members of our community serving on council.

Beach Bytes

This week begins a monthly column, to last for six months, entitled Beach Bytes.

Written by a local computer enthusiast John Caywood, the articles will attempt to make it easier for the consumer to move into the computer world.

John will address consumer questions in his column, and says that many computer buffs like to exchange information and programs but sometimes don't always know how to meet the right people. In addition, John says there are several computer stores in Virginia Beach which, because of their opening date, are deleted from the current telephone book.

If you are interested in computers or would like to ask John any questions, drop him a line in care of The Sun.

Bill is an attack on memories, writer says

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

In the Virginia General Assembly there is a bill, S. 112, which will amend our present Lee-Jackson State Holiday on third Monday in January to make it a Lee-Jackson-King Holiday. The State Senate passed by a 36 to 4 vote Senate Bill No. 112 which now goes to the House General Laws Committee for consideration any time now.

The proposed Lee-Jackson-King Holiday is absurd and ridiculous. Lee and Jackson were sons of Virginia and a part of our Virginia heritage. King was not a Virginian. Too, Martin Luther King's life and beliefs were completely opposite that of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, who were two great Confederate Generals. King was anti-military. In speech after speech King hit the war (military) machine and opposed Congressional appropriations for the military budget, stating that this money should be spent on domestic and welfare programs.

S. 112 elevates King to the same level of prominence and prestige as Lee and Jackson and above Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, George Mason and Patrick Henry—all great Virginia sons not honored with a state holiday.

If this bill is passed, I expect next year or anytime thereafter King's proponents to make an all-out drive to eliminate the Lee-Jackson part and just have a Martin Luther King, Jr. day to conform with the Federal King Holiday. (Fairfax County School Board eliminated the Lee-Jackson school holiday and will have a permanent "M. L. King school holiday" starting in 1985. Arlington County Board just recently did away with their Lee-Jackson Co. holiday and replaced it with M. L. King Day.)

I consider S. 112 an attack upon the memory and honor of Lee and Jackson. If you want to preserve our Lee-Jackson Holiday and not have it amended, please immediately contact your Delegates and House General Laws Committee members and urge them to vote against it. Chairman is Delegate Alan A. Diamondstein, General Assembly Building, Richmond, Va. 23219. If it clears the Committee, the House is expected to pass it with Governor Robb signing it. Presently there is a Martin Luther King Day on January 1st in Virginia.

Get off to the right start

Just bought a computer and don't know what to do with it? Or are you trying to decide which computer to buy? Virginia Beach computer users' groups can help with both questions.

It's often difficult or expensive to get expert advice on how to make your computer do what you want. The computer seems to have a mind of its own (it really doesn't!), and it can make you feel awfully stupid when it doesn't do what you think it should.

Someone once said that a computer is the one appliance you can buy that doesn't have a purpose when you buy it—you are the one that supplies the purpose. And it's software (programs) that enable the computer to accomplish your purpose.

So once you've bought your computer, how do you learn what to do with it? The manufacturers often supply manuals that are either thin and unreadable, or so thick and comprehensive that they're intimidating.

Enter the user group.

Computer user's groups are loose organizations of computer owners. You'll find that these owners have had the same problems you've had. They've had the same questions, and the same misunderstandings. Not only can people in the group help you understand your knowledge of the machine, but someone usually has or knows of a program that can help with your problem.

Some will seem to know so much more than you that you can only understand every third word. Most will have about the same understanding that you have. And because people learn differently, you will probably find that sooner or later someone will have a question that you can answer.

User groups have a purpose, too, for those who haven't bought a computer yet, but would like to. Most groups will allow you to attend a few meetings without officially joining or paying dues. Once there, you can listen to people's comments about their computers. Do a lot of people complain about the disk drives? Are several of them raving about a new program? Do they wish they had bought this or that item sooner?

Thank heavens for computer salespeople, but they make their living from selling computers. If they can make a bigger sale, it often means more money in their pocket—and more out of yours. Salespeople can be a big Holidays or poetry?

Tough decision.

Write a few words condemning national holidays, expounding on the sins of a three-day weekend? Or forget the frustration, slap George Washington in the face, and write about Victorian poetry.

I thought and thought about it; even wrote a few leads. But it was no good. I made a mental phone call.

"Alfred!"

"Yes, my boy."

"I need help. Which is a better topic? National holidays or Victorian poetry?" A rhetorical question, for sure.

"My life has crept so long on a broken wing through cells of madness, haunts of horror and fear, that I come to be grateful at last for a little thing."

"That's very nice, Mr. Tennyson, but it doesn't answer my question. I mean, it doesn't directly answer my question."

"Well my boy, you must discern from my answer the meaning."

"I understand what you said and you said it beautifully. But certainly you'd rather see something written on poetry than on deceased national heroes."

"All along the valley, where the waters flow, I walked with one, I loved two and thirty years ago."

"That's great. But I'm running out of time. Holidays or poetry?"

"Which would you prefer?"

"Poetry."

"Fine. But let me ask you. Why?"

"National holidays are counter productive to the American economy and its labor force. Plus, I don't understand why we honor only dead heroes when many live heroes are still living."

"In the case of George Washington's birthday, for example. No one living today knew him. But year after year we keep remembering him."

"Perhaps he's remembered for his accomplishments and not just for being a man. He was the father of our country."

"Yes, he may be the father but it's the children that keep it going."

"Summer is coming, summer is coming. I know it. I know it. I know it. Light again, leaf again, life again, love again! Yes, my wild little poet."

"Lord Tennyson, in 1850 you were appointed to succeed William Wordsworth as poet laureate, and from that day until your death you were the official poetic voice of Victorian England. Can you compare that to any other honor? Might there not someday be a national holiday honoring you?"

"Ask me no more - the moon may draw the sea; the cloud may stoop from heaven and take the shape, with fold to fold, of mountain or of cape; But O Too fond, when have I answered thee? Ask me no more."

"Yes sir. I hope I didn't bother you."

"No no, not at all my young friend. If you seek counsel, please call again."

"I shall, sir. I promise. I shall."

Glenn McClanan sponsors road bills

Increased road funding for the City of Virginia Beach is the goal of four separate bills introduced recently by Delegate Glenn B. McClanan and co-sponsored by all members of the Virginia Beach delegation.

Under the existing system, not enough weight is given to such factors as population and size of the City or county. Also, insufficient attention is given to the number of vehicles registered in the community.

Since the City of Virginia Beach has to spend local money on its roads because of inadequate funding, the first of Delegate McClanan's bills provides that the State will provide equal matching funds for all local money spent. This bill will encourage localities to help themselves.

The second bill increases the total amount of money to go to cities and road construction, plus it creates a special "high growth area road fund." The money in this special fund would be granted to localities that had at least a 15 percent increase in their population between 1970 and 1980.

Presently funds are received by the City for street maintenance by a system established informally by the State Highway Commission.

Delegate McClanan's next bill provides that the funds will be distributed on the basis of the number of land miles that exist within the City.

Delegate McClanan's last bill provides that 1/3 of the total funds for road construction will go to cities, and that this money would be divided among the cities in the State on the basis of population.

Robert Person

built," Person said. "It's a tool for today's world; mostly for tomorrow's world."

In tomorrow's world, computers will become more prevalent in households, especially in the more discriminating ones. Person profiles the average computer user as some one who likes to stay ahead.

"He is very interested in high technology because of his work or his interests. He is extremely interested in seeing his child prepared for the future. It's very obvious to everyone that their children will have to be knowledgeable about computers."

"They either make an assumption or they ask the basic question, 'what type of computers are you familiar with?' If you have none, today you might get the job. In as early as maybe five years from now, you'd probably be dropped down on the qualified list." - Person

"It's going to have more effect on our living standards than any device ever created by man," Person continued.

The mistake people most often make in buying computers is that they expect it to do things it can't.

"People have to really become somewhat familiar with what to expect from a computer," Person said, adding that if they expect too much they will become disenchanted and the computer will become a "dust collector."

As the future use of computers in household increases, people will find new ways to use it, such as tapping into the stock market or to the local department store. Computers may set alarms in homes and monitor telephone calls. Person said people will use computers, "not for recipes or budget preparations but for controlling their energy conservation" and other cost-saving measures.

help in putting together all the parts you need, especially if they're very familiar with the equipment. But they can also tempt you to push your budget beyond its limits. It's an easy temptation to yield to if you're not very clear on what you want.

In the computer user groups, you'll generally find a fierce loyalty to the machine: how good ours is! How much better ours is than anyone else's! But you'll also find a great deal of honesty in confronting any problems with the computer or software. Armed with knowledge you've gained from attending a few user group meetings, you can approach a computer salesman with a much better idea of what you need, what you want, and how much you will have to pay.

People in the group will express their preferences, too, for one retailer or another, though most groups have an official policy of not recommending one store over another. You'll hear of new stores in the area, and of which ones have the best prices on disks, or software, or printers.

The accompanying list of computer user groups can help get you started toward better understanding of your needs for a computer, and can give you a clear idea of what you will want to buy. Attend a meeting or two for a computer you've thought of buying, and join the ranks of computer devotees.

Future columns will cover computer purchase in more detail. Some of the jargon will be explained, and we'll discuss how much of the jargon you can ignore.

Coming next: The first questions to ask yourself before buying a computer.

O'Brien's bill approved by House

A bill sponsored by J.W. "Billy" O'Brien, H.B. 241 has been approved by the House of Delegates.

This bill dealing with group accident and sickness insurance would require insurers to offer to persons whose eligibility has terminated under group policy similar insurance coverage.

This bill was introduced by Delegate O'Brien after learning of a problem that faced a constituent in his district. The constituent's husband passed away, and after learning that Virginia was only one of four states that did not have an agreement with the insurance company, found that she could not convert her husband's major medical insurance.

O'Brien realizing the traumatic experience this can place upon people then introduced H.B. 241 which will rectify this problem.

For further information on H.B. 241, contact Delegate J.W. O'Brien at (804) 786-1715.

Express chicken wings easy on wallet

Inexpensive chicken wings are transformed into a savory entree that will bring a touch of the Orient to your table. Empress Ginger Wings are as pleasing to the palate as they are to the wallet. Oriental cooks have known for centuries that naturally brewed soy sauce is one of the most versatile seasonings for all types of food. And you'll agree that the secret of this marvelous marinade is the naturally brewed Kikkoman Soy Sauce. The marinade, a blend of soy sauce, sherry, fresh ginger and garlic, also becomes the piquant sauce that makes this bargain dish an Oriental specialty.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1½ pounds chicken wings (about 8 wings) | 1 clove garlic, minced |
| 3 tablespoons Kikkoman Soy Sauce | 2 tablespoons vegetable oil |
| 1 tablespoon sherry | ¼ cup cornstarch, about |
| 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger root | 2 green onions and tops, thinly sliced |
| | 1 teaspoon silvered fresh ginger root |

Disjoint chicken wings; discard tips (or save for stock). Combine soy sauce, sherry, minced ginger and garlic in large bowl; stir in chicken. Marinate 1 hour, stirring occasionally. Remove chicken; reserve marinade. Heat oil in large frying pan over medium heat. Lightly coat chicken pieces with cornstarch; add to frying pan and brown slowly on all sides. Remove chicken from pan; drain off fat. Stir ½ cup water and reserved marinade into same pan. Add chicken; sprinkle green onions and silvered ginger evenly over chicken. Cover and simmer 5 minutes, or until chicken is tender. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

This room reduces the hands-off sanctimony of formal rooms to a new dawn of lights, mirrors, and glass showing off everything in sight from an earthenware collection, to a durrrie rug, to a wall treatment across the room.

In a new furniture design concept -- the pier system -- complete walls are now being used for storage and for decorative display.

Here, the display "Cabinets" of oak, with their glass doors, stand as a wall of glass, backed by a mirror. Overhead, rheostat-controlled lights illuminate the colorful floral arrangement.

Each of the handsome "piers" houses a mirrored back, an interior light with a dimmer switch, and a beveled glass door. Pieces stand alone or can be paired with others.

The furniture is from Thomasville's SIERRA Collection and is available with either the upholstered chairs illustrated or with cane-back chairs as accompaniments to the Glass-Top table. Sixty-eight inches long, the table includes two sixteen-inch leaves extending seating capacity to one hundred inches. Three other dining table styles are also available. All pieces, however combined, create contemporary treasures to fit special needs and tastes.

Nail polish dries quicker with cooking oil

Plain kerosene is another good deterrent.

Or use Liquid Smoke, rubbed lightly on the skin. Outdoors, you might try throwing old rags or dry you've added two to three tablespoons of alcohol.

Musty Rooms, Freshening - Buy some new cedar chips at a furniture manufacturer or saw mill. Then place them in the leg of an old pair of panty hose. Tie off the end and place in the room. One or two of these will freshen your room for twelve months.

Nail Polish, Drying Quickly - After applying, give each nail a quick spray with any good cooking oil spray to make it dry quickly.

Nail Polish, Removing - The safest thing to use is denatured alcohol. Use a soft cloth to sponge the area with the alcohol. If the nail polish is dry, add a few drops of ammonia to the alcohol and continue to sponge until the nail polish breaks up. Wash with warm, soapy water.

If the material is not acetate, nail polish remover can be used. Use banana oil on Acetate.

Nail Polish, Thinning - Stand the bottle in hot water, covering about half of it, for two to three minutes. It will become smooth.

Nail Polish Remover - Why buy expensive nail polish remover? A small bottle of acetone from the drugstore is as good a remover as anything else.

Nails, Splitting The Wood - Before hammering, dip the point of the nail into melted paraffin wax. It'll prevent costly splits.

manure on an open fire. Mosquitoes do not like the smoke.

Moths, Getting Rid Of - Moth balls are still the best, of course, but here's another way. Insert six whole cloves in the top half of a fresh orange. It not only helps get rid of moths, but gives off a spicy odor as well.

Mustard Stain, Removing - Soak the spot with warm glycerine. Work the spot between the fingers for sixty seconds, then wash in warm, soapy water to which

Real Estate News

By Roger G. Pyle

The Federal National Mortgage Association recently announced that it is making $100 million available to homebuyers through a network of predominantly black real estate brokers in 21 U.S. cities.

Members of the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, who are known as Realists, will market special Fannie Mae mortgages with affordability and consumer protection features.

The move represents the largest real estate broker transaction and the first time that Fannie Mae has funneled one of its commitments into the mortgage market through a real estate sales trade group. Fannie Mae and NAREB officials expect to provide financing for about 2,000 low to moderate income families in largely urban areas.

"This is a significant fulfillment of Fannie Mae's public purpose of providing liquidity to the home mortgage market," said Richard Betchely, Fannie Mae's senior vice president of marketing and regional activities.

"And this action affirms Fannie Mae's strong commitment to community development in the nation's cities."

The cities in which Realist will market the mortgages are Akron, Ohio; Atlanta, Ga.; Baton Rouge, La.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; Columbus, Ohio; Dayton, Ohio; Dallas and Fort Worth; Kansas City, Mo.; Los Angeles; Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Tenn.; Miami, Fla.; Milwaukee, Wis.; New York; Norfolk, Va.; Richmond, Va.; St. Louis, Mo.; Seattle, Wash.; and Washington, D.C.

The mortgages have an adjustable interest rate but also have a limit on how high the rate can rise during the life of the loan.

Cooperative efforts boost 1984 Olympics

Olympic spirits soared recently as McDonald's restaurants across the country raised their Olympic flags in tribute to the 1984 Winter and Summer Olympic Games.

McDonald's at 4696 Bonney Road participated in Virginia Beach, as Kathleen Dick raised the McDonald's Olympic flag. Kathleen is a student at Western Branch High School in Chesapeake and is a Summer Olympic hopeful in the 200 meter breast stroke.

The flag was raised on the same day the Olympic flame was lit in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia to begin the Winter Games.

Crop losses from the drought in 1983 were staggering...corn yields were down 48 percent and soybeans down by one-third, according to USDA estimates.

Crops, however, that were under some form of conservation tillage, particularly no-till, were in better shape than those under conventional tillage, said Louis Cullipher, District Conservationist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service in Virginia Beach. Improved moisture holding capacity is one of the greatest benefits of conservation tillage in a drought year like this one.

Conservation tillage can make the bad times better and make the best of the good times, said Cullipher. Farmers using conservation tillage and researchers studying demonstration plots have learned that:

- Crops under conservation tillage show signs of stress 5 to 10 days later than conventionally tilled crops. Delaying stress during pollination and critical growth stages often means higher yields;
- Crops residue delays evaporation of moisture and allows the rainfall to soak in;
- During stress periods, there can be as much as 2 inches or more of soil moisture available for crops with conservation tillage and no-till than with conventional tillage;

- No-till or irrigated wheat can save as much water as it takes to irrigate the crop once with 4 inches of water; and

- In dry years, crops under conservation tillage, particularly no-till, yield better than conventionally tilled crops.

- No-till or irrigated wheat can save as much water as it takes to irrigate the crop once with 4 inches of water; and

- In dry years, crops under conservation tillage, particularly no-till, yield better than conventionally tilled crops.

The plant residue left on the surface by conservation tillage helps hold moisture by covering the surface to reduce moisture evaporation and decreasing runoff to allow more infiltration of water into the root zone. As the organic matter content increases in the seedling zone, the water holding capacity of the soil improves.

SCS personnel are available and interested in helping farmers plan for conservation tillage in 1984. Call 427-4775 if you're interested.

For emergencies

New Oceana equipment placed

What do you do when a major piece of emergency equipment continually breaks down and you can't get a replacement? Well, if you are Chief Warrant Officer 4 (CWO4) Stanley Grimm, and you are in charge of the Ground Electronics Division at Naval Air Station Oceana—Air—Operations Department, and you are becoming really discouraged with "going through the normal channels" and getting nowhere, you might just decide to build it yourself.

With that end in mind, and with a goodly assist from the NAS Oceana Public Works Department and a "cumshaw artist" by the name of Trademan Second Class (TD2) Jeffrey Marl who directed and coordinated the effort, CWO Grimm and the Ground Electronics staff have put together what might be called a "mobile marvel" of ground and ground-to-air communications systems. The unit serves as a backup unit for the Air Operations tower communications system.

Not even slightly resembling the outdated unit, which by the way was purchased in 1967 at a cost of $100,000, the new "00" emergency tower communicator unit is a true example of "Yankee ingenuity". Using an "excess"

1976 J-20 Jeep ambulance from Recruit Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill., which TD2 Marl was able to obtain last October at no cost to the station, and all of the equipment that could be "begged, borrowed or bought" from the department, Public Works and suppliers, the crew managed to piece together a "right workable" device.

Although not particularly impressive in appearance, except for the bright yellow paint job and the dual control Smith and Wesson Road Master light bar equipped with red and amber strobe lights, 360 degree floodlights and a public address system, the new unit "has exceeded the capabilities of the old one both in quantity and in quality," according to CWO Grimm. "And I'm talking a quantum leap," he added.

"The old unit had several drawbacks," he explained. Besides the fact that it constantly was in need of repair, the radios could be used only one-at-a-time and then only when the truck was stationary. The engine had to be operating at a specific rpm in order to produce power to run the equipment, and the transmitting range was only 80-90 miles on high frequency.

CWO Grimm said that the department had been trying to purchase a new unit since 1975, but with no success since there are no manufacturers who make one that would meet their needs.

The new unit is designed so that it can be run not only off the truck motor, but also off 28-volt generators supplying a separate set of deep well batteries and off common 110-volt electrical outlets. Additionally, there is room and power for up to five operators to work simultaneously. The unit is equipped with two VHA AM frequency radios, one VHF FM radio and two UHF multichannel ultra high frequency radios. Also, whereas the old unit took at least three minutes to set up for operation, the new unit's radios may be operated immediately upon entering the vehicle.

Radios in the unit are set for contact with not only the aircraft flown here and the carriers at sea, but also with NAS Security, the airport runway network, the Fire Department and the disaster control network. TD2 Marl said that he made sure that all electronic equipment used in the unit was the newest available so that replacement parts would be available "over a long period of time."

The new unit has a tactical range of 50 miles on air to ground circuits and has increased the high frequency range by about 25 percent.

"I fully believe," said GWO Grimm in speaking of the unit, "that this is the only one that is even near these capabilities and does all it's advertised to do...it's clean, it's safe, and it's comfortable."—The unit has a heating and air conditioning system designed both to keep the crew comfortable and to keep the equipment functioning properly.

Perhaps the most impressive part of the project, however, is that it cost the station only about $4,600 to build. A comparable unit, in Grimm's estimation, would have cost about $200,000 if purchased piecemeal through normal channels.

The project, which CWO Grimm called "a massive joint effort," was a "fine piece of cooperation between Public Works and here (Ground Electronics)."

Although Grimm takes partial credit for the initial design of the unit, he said that TD2 Marl did much of the design and most of the actual legwork in getting the parts together, and he

nearly one year to complete from the initial idea until the completed unit

Super Skate '84 planned

The Association of Retarded Citizens in Virginia, College Park Skating Center, D&J's Roller Skating Center, Plaza Roller Rink, Haygood Skating Center and the Ocean Front and Virginia Wesleyan Jaycees and the Norfolk Civic Club have announced plans for this spring's Super Skate '84, a fund raising event to benefit the ARC in Virginia.

Super Skate '84, a ten hour roller skating marathon, is being held all over Tidewater Virginia on Saturday, March 3 and Sunday, March 4. Materials and information are available at the rinks and schools, or by calling 1-800-552-3468.

Coordinating Super Skate '84 for the Ocean Front and Virginia Wesleyan Jaycees and the Norfolk Civic Club are Doug Kellam and Jim Thomson (Ocean Front) and Danny Braisher (Virginia Wesleyan) and John Shirley and Jack Hamilton (Norfolk Civic). The Civic Clubs will be working at the rinks on the day of the event, in charge of the Collection Day (two weeks after the event), and will be assisting with Grand Awards on April 7th. The Civic Clubs will also be helping with local publicity, getting materials in the schools, securing refreshments for the skaters and performing other jobs to make Super Skate '84 a success.

Participants in Super Skate '84 raise pledges for every mile they skate during the event. Miles skated are determined by how many hours the participant skates. Prizes will be awarded for reaching certain monetary goals and include a VCR, a personal home computer, home video games, precision skates, portable TVs, radios, stereo systems, trophies, T-Shirts, free passes, certificates and more.

Proceeds from Super Skate '84 will benefit the Association for Retarded Citizens in Virginia. The work of ARC/Virginia, the largest not-for-profit organization advocating for the mentally retarded in the state, focuses primarily upon assisting its 40 local chapters throughout the state, working with various governmental bodies to be an advocate for Virginia's 165,000 mentally retarded citizens, and promoting public awareness and acceptance of people who are mentally retarded.

Donations to Super Skate '84 are tax deductible and should be made by check to ARC/Virginia. Participation in the event is open to everyone!

Sewer service approved

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Virginia Beach City Council has established a sewer service area which encompasses all of Phase I of the Sandbridge Sewer project.

By restricting the size of the force main to 24 inches, Council has also eliminated a future tie-in to the system by the Sandbridge Beach area which is included in Phase II.

Council Monday evening, by a vote of 7-3, adopted an ordinance setting up the service area, a new concept in the Beach which is designed to service only areas where development is allowed by present zoning. At the same time, service would not be accessible in areas where growth is not being encouraged, such as the agricultural areas in the southern part of the city.

Council's final compromise on the 24-inch line Monday evening ruled out extension of sewer service farther south.

Voting against the ordinance Vice Mayor Barbara Henley, and Councilwomen Reba McClannan and Meyera Oberdorf. Councilman W.H. Kitchin III was absent.

The cost of the project will be shared by the city and developers. Of the total cost of $783,000, the city expects to pay $374,800. The developers, False Cape Enterprises Inc., Lakeside Development and Lotus Creek Associates have agreed to pay the cost of a 16-inch line from General Booth Boulevard to the Lago Mar Subdivision along the proposed Ferrell Parkway. The line would serve Red Mill Farms, Lagomar, Hell's Point, Lotus Garden and the campground.

The cost of a 36-inch line, which would serve all of Phase I and Phase II, city participation at $783,000.

Councilman John A. Baum proposed going with the 24-inch main. City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck pointed out that the city has no agreement as yet with the developers but that once the size of the main is established, he would bring back agreements.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said he thought going with the 24-inch line was short-sighted. "We're going to wish we had a 36-inch pipeline," he said.

Baum, however, considered the decision an acceptable compromise. He said he did not think council could sell the public on Phase I and II. "This type of solution is solid, upfront, and straightforward," he said, and gives the staff a clearer case of direction.

Vice Mayor Henley still questioned the financing. She has expressed the belief that developers should participate to a greater extent in the developed portion of Lagomar. This section is served by private sewage treatment facilities which discharge into Back Bay by way of Hells Point Creek and North Bay. The system is an environmental and potential health hazard.

The city expects to recoup its cost in line fees. Estimates of potential connection fees amount to a total of $1,065,285 for an

At Oceana

Sailor of the quarter named

"Air traffic works like a ballet—it has to have a smooth flow," said Air Traffic Controller Third Class (AC3) Mark Duncan who recently was named Naval Air Station (NAS) Oceana Sailor of the Quarter.

Duncan was selected for the honor because of his "sincere desire to excel and his positive attitude" which, according to his letter of Commendation from NAS Oceana skipper, Captain C. L. Tinker, "have enhanced division morale and contributed significantly to the safe operation of aircraft from this station."

Duncan, now 23, said that he acquired his love for aviation early in life because his father was a private pilot. His decision to join the Navy in September 1981 came as the result of struggling financially for three years to complete only one-and-one-half years of study at Mississippi State University in the electrical engineering field.

As an air traffic controller at the NAS Oceana Air Operations Department, AC3 Duncan is responsible for directing aircraft taxiing to and from the runways, directing all vehicle and pedestrian traffic on the runways, and directing emergency operations such as "crash" sites and firefighting. He also is qualified to coordinate arrivals and departures of aircraft between the radar operators and the tower communicators.

The next step in his training, Duncan said, is to learn to direct the "local" airspace traffic which is everything in the air within a five-mile radius of the base and up to 3,000 feet in altitude. After that he will learn how to use the radar systems.

The job can be pretty hectic at times, Duncan said, "like when the tower has 20 to 25 aircraft out at a time and you've got to sequence them into a pattern two or three at a time. It's a hard job to explain... You have to make instantaneous decisions and you don't have time to think about it."

What he likes about the job is that "there is no manual labor—you talk for a living," but most importantly, "people depend on you to make the right decision at the right time."

Art Work

Mayor Jones displays work

Mayor Louis Jones will be presenting slides and discussing his art work at the Bow Creek Recreation Center in Virginia Beach on March 4th at 2 p.m.

Jones has been voted into American Artist of Renown. He shows his work in galleries throughout the United States and is distributed in galleries in England, West Germany, Australia, and Israel.

The presentation is being sponsored by the Chesapeake Bay Watercolorists and is open to the public. A two dollar fee will be charged for non-members.

Continental installing new testing equipment

Continental Telephone is installing a new testing system that finds troubles even before the telephone customers notice them. The computerized testing equipment has been so successful in the Gloucester area during the past year that Continental is installing the system statewide, said Mike Hall, supervisor-telephone services.

"Preventing telephone troubles before they happen is the beauty of the new system," Hall said. "We can program the computer to test phone equipment at night. This way we can detect developing troubles and prevent them from happening."

Emergency numbers, fire, police and rescue squad, are automatically and routinely checked by the new system. In fact, entire equipment offices are routinely monitored. (An equipment office processes calls and sends them to their destinations.)

"The system is incredibly accurate," Hall said. "More than 90% of the time the trouble is where the test equipment tells us it is. The new system has really helped us speed up our service."

When a customer calls repair service, a Continental employee presses a key on the computer terminal and types in the customer's phone number. Then the computer automatically performs 12 tests and gives the employee a code. From this code the employee can tell where the trouble is - in the equipment office, in the cable or in the telephone set.

After a repairperson has gone out to fix a trouble, said Hall, Contel can quickly test to see if the repair work solved the problem.

It's a nice problem

It's a nice problem to have: how will the city use the $5.5 million Sajo manor house and 4.5 acres of land which will be donated to the community by developer R. G. Moore? The offering is part of the deal when Moore closes on the 430-acre farm this spring.

The parcel lies south of Northampton Boulevard between Virginia Wesleyan College and Lake Smith.

There have been several suggestions as to what to do with the site, among them plans to develop the facility into a treatment center for disturbed children, or a senior citizens center. A performing arts center and a history museum have also been mentioned.

City Council will make the final decision on how the site will be used, and arriving at that decision will not be easy. Because of the existing maritime historical museum and the forthcoming fine arts center and marine science museum, choosing a facility for youths or the elderly must surely merit careful consideration.

The elderly have brought the city to where it is today, and the children will make it work tomorrow. Perhaps there could be combined uses for the facility.

Hopefully a decision on how to use the property will not be time consuming or costly. Neither should it be hasty. But this is a situation where, whatever the final decision is, the city and community have gained. Whatever happens, don't dwell on what might have been. Appreciate whatever it is.

Jews and Jackson

Jews might have been more understanding of Jesse Jackson, for calling them "hymies" if the presidential hopeful hadn't already been photographed five years earlier kissing Palestine leader Yasser Arafat.

So now, while campaigning, some reporters reported him casting the pejorative descriptions. He at first tried to deny it, but changed his story when he realized the reporters' account was not to be doubted. Plus, there might have been a tape of the remarks made.

He went to a New Hampshire synagogue for forgiveness. Before addressing the congregation, he told the temple's rabbi that "I'd like to be accepted in the Lord's house." Of course he was also alluding to the White House.

Jackson is human, and being so makes him subject to the same slips and mistakes that befalls anyone. This one is classic because it's one minority calling another minority names. Jackson got a slam dunk when he obtained the release of captured U.S. flier Robert Goodman. That allowed him to be even more of a contender in this year's presidential election. But now his loose tongue has caused him to turn over the ball. And the swarming defense, the Jewish Defense League, is going to try its best to keep him from getting it back.

It was such a silly thing for him to say, especially when you expect him as a political and public figure to have enough good sense to know that he couldn't say anything like that anywhere except his bathroom and it not expect to be repeated.

Helping others

The Beach House, a therapy house for schizophrenics located on Virginia Beach Boulevard, has existed peacefully for years. The visitors freely go and come, usually while on medication, and sincerely appreciate the opportunity to be able to hang around with people with interests, or under circumstances, similar to their own.

There are now plans to operate a home for mentally disabled patients in the north end of Virginia Beach. If there is opposition, it should be noted and considered thoughtfully. The final decision must hinge on the service the facility offers to the community versus any possible risks. There is no evidence to indicate that the care of the patients at that location will pose a threat. Remember, mental patients who have been determined to be mental patients may not be that dangerous. It's the ones who don't know they are sick, and are lurking around in society at will, that pose the most threat to the public at large.

Plenty of good news from Forum

The history of Virginia Beach and Princess Anne County is one topic that consistently sparks interest in the library. Our newest residents want to know how Diamond Springs Road received its name or what is the historical derivation of the word "Seatack." Our older residents respond to this curiosity with a willingness and ability to add new facts and understanding to the existing historical record.

One expression of the library's response is the Virginia Beach History Forum. The Forum is presently composed of thirteen individuals and representatives of organizations. The Tidewater Oral History Society, the Virginia Beach Genealogical Society, the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum, the Princess Anne Historical Society, the Lynnhaven House, Virginia Wesleyan College and the Virginia Beach Public Library participate in the activities of the Forum in league with individuals interested in the history of our city. The Forum is unique because it does not desire to supplant the work of any existing organization, but rather to explore the advantages of cooperation as a method of strengthening the activities of each Forum member. The success of the Forum will be measured by the degree to which its members thrive. It is open to any organization or individual who desires to participate in its activities.

One of the primary purposes of the Forum is to encourage members to exchange information concerning their activities. The Forum meets on the last Wednesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. in the Oceanfront Area Library (1811 Arlic Avenue. New members are always welcome.

A natural extension of this desire to share experiences is the production of a comprehensive resource catalog describing the location, contents and methods of access to Princess Anne and Virginia Beach historical materials currently held by individuals and organizations throughout Tidewater. This is the first project of the Forum. Never before has such a resource been developed. It will enable the researcher, the student and the hobbyist to know quickly and accurately where books, manuscripts, and artifacts relating to our history are stored and how a person can get access to them. The Forum is surveying over fifty individuals and organizations during its initial compilation phase. It intends to publish a preliminary catalog by June. It is seeking funds to expand this work into a complete catalog of each item of historical importance located in Tidewater.

Members of the Forum also want to increase the historical awareness of residents of Virginia Beach. The Forum intends to publish brochures describing our city's heritage, to erect plaques, signs and roadside markers commemorating important historical events and ultimately to sponsor a speakers' bureau of individuals willing to talk about various facets of our history.

A key element in the nurturing of our local history is the ongoing acquisition of documents, manuscripts and artifacts that create a greater understanding of our past and document our present activities for the future. The Forum wants to become a clearinghouse for the acquisition of Princess Anne County and Virginia Beach historical artifacts. It does not want to become a museum, but rather it wants to be a visible and trusted member of the community to which individuals and organizations will feel comfortable donating the papers and artifacts of friends and relatives. Donors will understand that the Forum will place the materials with a caretaker that can best preserve them and make them available to the public.

None of this is possible without money. The Forum has already begun to survey private foundations interested in supporting such a vibrant local history undertaking. It wants to be financially self-sufficient and to provide information to member individuals and organizations that will help them obtain money for their own projects more successfully.

In 1983 Virginia Beach celebrated the 20th anniversary of its merger with Princess Anne County. That same year marked the 100th anniversary of the opening of oceanfront to tourism. It is fitting that a Forum of local history enthusiasts chose to ban together during that same year in a commitment to make the history of our exciting city more accessible to our residents. The public library is proud to be one member of that organization.

Rain and new clubs

It's late, 4 a.m. Been raining all day and all night. I don't mind. Better it's rain and not snow. You can still move around in the rain if you want. When it snows heavily, most activity ceases.

Farmers like rain. Politicians hate it on caucus, primary or election days. Firemen like rain.

I remember as a kid, waking up to rain. The relentless soft patter. The water gurgling down the gutters. In my bed I always felt warm and secure. Back to sleep. Awaken again to the sounds of cars and school buses swishing over the wet roads. It was cold and nasty outside, but warm and dry inside. It used to be dark early in the morning when it rained. Plus, I had to get up early to go to high school. It was that much darker that much sooner after the sun has risen. (Does that make sense?)

Later in life, rain meant that the tennis court had to be swept before we could play. Or we could wait until later in the afternoon and hope it'd be sun-dried.

Getting the feel for your car meant skidding on wet streets to make sure the steering and brakes worked properly. They did.

Rain is always good to knock the dust off your car between washes.

Rain never depressed me. It represented change. The weather constantly changes. That's also part of the allurements of the sea: you can watch out over it at night and see lights and ships. The lights wink. A buoy tolls. The ships come and go. There's always motion above and below the surface. And all of this is even better when it rains.

The rain washes the plants and trees. It gives them life. It sustains the world.

I remember one time many years ago we were in Ghent. It was raining and we were visiting one of her relatives. I don't know why but, while standing in the rain, I knew we were going to get into a fight and make up.

The more it rains in big bodies of water, the fresher the water will be for aquatic life as it lessens the concentration of chemicals. I think it's now 4:30 a.m.

The University of Virginia should have fired Terry Holland while Ralph Sampson was still an underclassman. That way, they probably would have had a national title during the Sampson era.

So what? Virginia beat N.C. State last weekend. State was nothing for a long time this year and is climbing back.

On another note, a friend asked me who I'd rather see as president. Walter Cronkite or Ronald Reagan? Couldn't decide. Then he asked me whether I'd rather see Sam Donaldson or Ronald Reagan as president. I said Donaldson. My friend has now suggested that we form "Dump Terry Holland" and "Sam Donaldson for President" clubs. Don't ask why.

seven public high schools. The Adam Thoroughgood, Lynnhaven Parish and Princess Anne County D.A.R. chapters solicit the honorees from approximately 4,700 junior history students. Oftentimes the winners come from the 100 or 120 students enrolled in the advanced placement history classes. Also, for the last four years the D.A.R. women, totaling between 150 and 200 in number, have honored the city's outstanding history teacher.

In addition to having the D.A.R. honor placed on the student's permanent record, the winners received a porthole portrait of George Washington and a Battle Off the Virginia Capes medallion during recent ceremonies held in the Board of Education Room, School Administration Building. Garrou said colleges and universities consider the honor highly when reviewing student applications, and he described the award as "very prestigious."

Garrou said the student winners were selected by the school's social studies department. The winning teachers were picked by the chapters. He also said he was unsure how many of the students went on to college to major in history or became history teachers, but added "We really ought to find that out." Many of the students, he suspects, go into law.

Not enough academic recognition given students chapters care about education. They also care about academic excellence and they certainly care about history. It is this concern that caused the D.A.R. to begin the American History Award Program seven years ago.

"There was not enough recognition given to academic excellence," said Mrs. Eugene T. Connors, regent Lynnhaven Parish D.A.R. "This is one way of giving that recognition."

Since 1956 when the National D.A.R. formed an American History Month Committee, the society has promoted the observance of February as American History Month.

"The goals are to stimulate a deeper understanding of American History by all citizens and to develop an appreciation of the contribution of all ethnic groups for the development of America," Mrs. Connors said.

She said the local awards program parallels the goals of the D.A.R.

"It incorporates the three objectives of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution: historical, educational and patriotic."

The Outstanding American History Teacher Contest, now in its fourth year, began "as a means of recognizing those teachers who do an exceptional job of motivating students to not only acquire a knowledge of American History but a love of it also," Mrs. Connors said. Each local D.A.R. chapter will sponsor a teacher in its respective state contest. The state winner will be announced next month in Roanoke and the national winner will be named in April in Washington.

The D.A.R. also offers student scholarships.

Beach Council Actions

The following is a list of some of the actions taken by Virginia Beach City Council at its most recent meeting. Council members are: John A. Baum, Blackwater Borough; Nancy A. Creech, At-Large; Barbara M. Henley, Pungo; Harold Heischberger, At-Large; H. Jack Jennings, Lynnhaven; Louis R. Jones, Bayside; Robert G. Jones, At-Large; W. H. Kitchin, III, Virginia Beach; Reba S. McClannan, Princess Anne; J. Henry McCoy, Jr., Kempsville; and Meyera Oberndorf, At-Large. The City Manager is Thomas Muehlenbeck. City Attorney is Dale Binson.

Meeting Date Feb. 27, 1984. All members present except Kitchin.

Informal Session 3 p.m.

Recess for executive session which lasted until approximately 5:30 p.m.

Informal Session continued 6 p.m.

Jennings requested a review of the Lynnhaven River situation toward the establishment of a specific program by City Council to promote the clean-up of the river. City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said he would start with the city's Task Force to determine the issues. Baum suggested it might be a good opportunity to determine how effective the sedimentation ordinance has been.

Discussion of possible dates for referendums for road, school and water supply bonds totaling $139 million. The consensus was that the May 1 Councilmanic election date was too soon for adequate promotion of the issues. Also, that a referendum at the same time as a Council election may place the referendum in the political arena.

Muehlenbeck submitted the interim financial statements for the period of July 1, 1983 through Jan. 31, 1984, reporting that revenues have been doing well. Jennings asked Muehlenbeck to report on reasons for the lower cigarette tax revenues.

Discussion of a disclaimer included in resolutions approving Industrial Revenue Bond issues. The disclaimer puts the entities authorizing the bonds on notice that if the Federal government places a cap on the amount of bonds the city can approve, the Authority and Council will have to decide which of the entities will have to give up their bond authorization.

Carl Thoren, assistant engineer in the Public Works Department, presented new flood plain maps provided by the U.S. Corps of Engineers. Muehlenbeck said that the maps will be used in making recommendations on new land use applications.

Formal Session 7:15 p.m.

Sam Houston issued an appeal to Council to keep the elderly and handicapped better informed about the city budget and the expenses they'll have to bear. He said that the public is interested in the things Council does. "They're not exactly dummies," he said. He also pointed out that the elderly make up 15 percent of the population and most live on fixed incomes. "The people on fixed incomes need to know more."

Linkhorn Ledger earns award

The Linkhorn Ledger, the school newspaper for Linkhorn Park Elementary, scored 965 points out of a possible 1,000 to earn a Medalist rating among elementary school newspapers in the 1983 contest sponsored by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. The Medalist rating is the highest award in the competition.

The newspaper was judged on make-up and display, content coverage, and general considerations and advertising. It earned the maximum score in all categories except features and artwork.

The Ledger is written, prepared, and distributed by sixth grade students under the direction of teachers Jane Hanson and Barbara Hansen. It is published four times a year. While most of the student "reporters" are sixth graders, all students in the school are encouraged to write articles for the paper.

The CSPA judges cited the Ledger for its excellent coverage of school news, good editorial section and suggested adding a little more artwork.

Reproduction of the paper is coordinated by the Office Services class of Gail Fausel at the Career Development Center.

The Virginia Beach Police Department would like to alert Virginia Beach residents to individuals who are soliciting door-to-door to paint house numbers on the curbs in front of their house.

These individuals are telling residents that the City is getting ready to adopt an ordinance requiring each household have their house number painted on the curb. The solicitors tell residents if they do not comply one of two things will occur: 1) they will receive a summons by Police and/or, 2) the Highway Department will come do the painting and bill them, they indicate the fee will be considerably higher than their $5 charge.

The City of Virginia Beach is not contemplating passing such an ordinance. If a citizen is approached regarding this, they are encouraged to report it to the Virginia Beach Police Department, Services Division, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., at 427-4331.

Commentary

Tribble on education

Excellence in education is a must. Ours is a worldwide community. Today, we compete with the nations of Western Europe and Japan. In Virginia, our young people go to school 180 days a year. But in the other industrialized nations, young people go to school for 220 days a year or more. Think of the advantage they have.

The Commission on Excellence in Education recently reported America is a nation at risk—that the rising tide of mediocrity in education is threatening our future. So it is imperative that we act now to improve the quality of education.

While the responsibility of education lies primarily with local and state governments, there are things the federal government can do.

In the first week of this new session of Congress, I introduced a joint resolution to designate 1984 as "The Year of Excellence in Education."

My purpose is to focus the nation's attention on the problems of education, generate a thoughtful discussion about what must be done to strengthen the educational process and hopefully, bring about an appropriate response from government—local, state and federal—and the private sector.

Our nation's well-being, today and in the future, requires an educational system second to none.

There are other legislative proposals being considered by Congress.

America faces a shortage of the scientists, engineers and technicians necessary to ensure our technological leadership in the world.

Legislation now before Congress tackles this problem directly. The Education for Economic Security Act will authorize the National Science Foundation to develop teacher institutes to increase skills in math and science, and create a program for teacher training and retraining, teaching awards for outstanding teachers and merit scholarships for students who choose math or science teaching as a career.

Today's economy requires technically competent men and women. This legislation has my full support.

Warner on elderly

Observing that his strong relationship with his 94-year-old mother, Martha Budd Warner, has given him "a firsthand understanding of the needs of the elderly," Sen. John W. Warner (R-VA) today was named to the Senate Select Committee on Aging.

"This is a committee assignment in which I have been interested since first coming to the Senate, and one I look forward to with great pleasure," said Warner.

"As individuals in our society live longer, it's becoming increasingly important that we draw on their many talents during their retirement. Retirement should only signal the end of one aspect of life and the beginning of another. The vast pool of experience, talent and intellectual resources possessed by our senior citizens must not go to waste."

In approaching his new committee assignment, Warner said he will be concerned not only with the needs of the elderly but also the needs of their family members who must provide necessary financial and emotional assistance to them during retirement.

"It's a dual situation, and it's important that we realize that there are special needs on both sides," said Warner.

Warner is also a member of the Armed Services, Energy and Natural Resources and Rules Committees.

A realignment of the Select Committee on Aging created the opening Warner has filled. Sen. John Heinz (R-PA.) serves as chairman of the committee.

Outstanding Young Firefighter is Lt. Curtis Crigler, who received the top award from the Virginia Beach Fraternal Order of Police last year.

Crigler, 34, began his career as a volunteer at the age of 16.

Outstanding Young Law Enforcement Officer is Louis Thurston, who is in charge of the Virginia Beach Police Department's Block Security Program.

Thurston, 35, oversees 38 communities participating in the program. The winners, selected by four judges, were drawn from 22 letters of nomination. Judges were Mayor Louis Jones, Virginia Beach Schools Public Information Director Joseph Lowenthal, 1979 Virginia Beach First Citizen Eileen Aysvazian and Virginia Beach Arts Center Director Frederick Schmid.

The winners were announced during ceremonies held recently at Tandom's on Virginia Beach Boulevard. Guest speaker for the evening was Virginia Beach City Councilman, and former Jaycee president and recipient of the state Outstanding Young Man award, Jack Jennings.

All Virginia Beach residents between the ages of 18 and 35 were eligible for nomination.

The Lighter Side

Side dishes

A traditional concept with contemporary appeal

Despite their recent appearance on modern menus, "side dishes" boast a long and colorful history. Research indicates that the term "side dishes" graced the tables of sea captains, colonial patriots and adventuresome pioneers.

With such a rich heritage, side dishes are standing up well to the test of time. Modern chefs and hostesses are serving side dishes that reflect imagination, flair and sound nutritional value.

With a wide variety of recipes and prepared products available, how does one select side dishes to complement an entrée? There are several criteria to consider:

Eye Appeal is one factor to keep in mind. Nutritionists have long known that an attractive variety of foods stimulates the appetite and generates greater enjoyment of a meal. It's therefore important to serve side dishes that contribute to the color and appearance of the meal.

For example, the color and texture of a simply prepared beef roast is greatly enhanced by bright green creamed spinach. The meal is attractively rounded out with a portion of scalloped potatoes which contribute both a chunky and creamy texture in addition to appealing color and taste.

The term side dish was in common use by the early 1700's and was defined at that time as an "accessory" or "addition". Modern side dishes like Stouffer's Fettuccini Alfredo are versatile and may be served to reflect imagination and flair with any meal.

Taste is another primary consideration. Certain flavors tend to harmonize well and it's important to choose items which complement each other. Too many foods with similar flavors detract from the interest of a meal, while a variety of flavors contribute to greater enjoyments.

Oil, Purifying - Heat it in a pan on top of the stove, but don't boil it. Then drop in two slices of raw potato for five minutes.

Onion Odors On Hands - Rub some dry mustard on your hands after peeling onions. Wait one minute, then wash hands in the usual way. You'll get rid of onion odors.

Or rub fresh lemon juice over the hands, let it dry, then wash off.

Nails Or Screws, Inserting Into Plaster - First, to prevent the plaster from breaking or cracking, heat the point of the nail in very hot water before inserting or hammering.

To make it tight and prevent it from falling or working out, remove the nail or screw, fill the hole with fine steel

To prevent plaster from shattering, put a strip of scotch tape over the spot. It's easy to remove after hammering the nail in.

Nickel, Cleaning And Polishing - Dampen a soft cloth with warm water, then rub it over soap or sprinkle it with soap powder. Bring to a good lather, then dip the cloth in salt and apply. When dry, polish with a soft cloth.

Nosebleed - Sit up, never lie down, and gently pinch together the soft part of the nose, about halfway up the nose. With the other hand, hold something very cold (an ice cube, a cold can of beer, a frozen article) on the side of the neck, just above the collar line.

Losing weight

A change in food habits helps loss

Considering the way food is eaten is important when trying to decrease the amount of food consumed.

When a person tries to lose weight, they should examine food-eating habits and consider new approaches to food, said L. Janette Taper, Virginia Tech Extension specialist in foods and nutrition.

"Skipping meals, snacking on empty calorie food when bored, or overeating when anxious, are the kind of habits that could lead to poor nutrition and possibly to weight gain," said Ms. Taper. She suggested some possible substitutions.

Choose a place where all eating will be done. This can be a kitchen or dining room table, a particular snack bar for lunch. It can differ with each meal.

"This helps avoid eating on the run, stopping at vending machines for extra candy or soft drinks," she said. "Also, make the eating place look nice. Eating should be a pleasant activity."

When eating, only eat. Do not watch television, study, talk on the telephone. Concentrate on the pleasures of eating.

Avoid problem food. Remove it from the house, or be sure it is stored in an appropriate area, preferably out of sight, said Ms. Taper who is a member of the faculty of Virginia Tech's College of Human Resources.

Replace junk food, those with high sugar and fat, and low nutrition, with food that is higher in nutrition.

Minimize contact with food. For example, clean up the ingredients for making a sandwich before eating the sandwich so there will not be as much temptation to make another sandwich.

Allow for some second helpings by making the first serving smaller. At a large meal it is better to divide the meal in half and go back. Or introduce a delay before going back for seconds and perhaps the second helping won't be so appealing.

Look over your daily schedule and see where you might have some habits that are adding calories to your diet, said Ms. Taper. Changing some of those habits, and changing them permanently could help you lose weight.

sweetness. Asparagus soufflé sounds out the taste appeal by adding a distinctive flavor that is neither herbal nor sweet.

Texture is an additional factor in the selection of appropriate side dishes. Entrees composed of bite-size pieces in a sauce should not be served with side dishes that are similarly prepared. For example, beef stroganoff would be better accompanied by a serving of spinach soufflé than by a creamy blend of potatoes and peas. Too many sauces tend to blend together on the plate, detracting from a meal's taste, appearance and texture.

Real Estate News

By Roger G. Pyle

Lenders and veterans say an administrative change contained in President Reagan's 1983 budget could make Veterans Administration mortgages harder to get.

Under the current policy, the VA usually takes over a house when a homeowner with a VA-backed loan cannot make mortgage payments. The VA then sells the home and pays off the mortgage.

The new policy calls for the VA to stop taking over property. Instead, the agency, which does not make loans but only guarantees them, would pay off on its guarantee when a homeowner defaults. The lender would then take over the house.

The policy, scheduled to go into effect March 1, does not need congressional approval.

The Mortgage Bankers Association and the Vietnam Veterans of America asked the VA to delay the start of the new policy.

Dr. Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the bankers association said the change could force lenders to "tighten the qualification criteria for obtaining loans" because lenders do not want the responsibility of getting involved in the mechanics of buying and selling real estate.

"Lenders may not be as willing to make VA loans," he said.

"This change in policy may well deny home ownership to tens of thousands of Vietnam-era veterans who were unable to buy homes during the recent recession," said Rick Weidman, director of agency liaison for Vietnam Veterans of America.

A Senate Veterans Committee staff member, speaking on condition he not be identified, said it is possible the policy will be delayed because new regulations need to be written.

Franchising - the latest innovation

Health care rental begins franchises around Tidewater

What worked so well for fast foods and auto repair (and countless other small businesses) will soon be working in the field of home health care equipment rental, say experts. Franchising - the latest innovation in the field regarded by business analysts as the number one growth industry in the decades of the 80's and 90's.

Under the trade-name AIDS, entrepreneur Maury Cooke has successfully operated outlets over the past 3 and one-half years in Portsmouth and elsewhere in southeastern Virginia. Franchising the operation began in a small way in eastern Virginia and North Carolina last year.

The AIDS store in Virginia Beach opened at Hilltop on January 1; in Portsmouth, at 1310 Airline Blvd., February 1. The AIDS facility on the Peninsula, 4128 West Mercury Blvd., is scheduled for expansion within a year. It will become a satellite training center for franchisees and their employees.

"With the federal government encouraging private investment in health care, and purveyors of hospitalization insurance encouraging home care whenever possible, there was never a more opportune time for one to enter the business of health care equipment rental," said Cooke.

Construction of the new AIDS 5,000 sq. ft. corporate headquarters and franchisee-training center is scheduled to break ground this month. The facility, on Poplar Hall Drive in Norfolk, near Military Circle Shopping Mall, will open May 1, permitting the full development of the franchise program.

"The potential of an AIDS franchise in a community of 25,000 population or more is such that it must be regarded as a full-time occupation," said Cooke. "I've had to turn down applicants who wanted to run our rental business as a sideline to a drug store or other operation. It just won't work."

Cooke noted that he got started in the home care equipment rental as part of his general rental business (tools, equipment for gardening, plumbing, auto repair, parties and weddings, guest and baby needs) but convalescence quickly became "the block off of the old chip." "Studies over the past 'American Medical News,'" Cooke added,

"recently reported that many patients, to avoid physicians' office visits, which have also increased in cost, are turning to diagnostic and monitoring kits for use at home."

"We have found," Cooke concluded, "that even without the recent government and insurance company stimuli - most people prefer to be cared for at home. With the government and insurance programs now favoring it too, the home care equipment rental business must grow and prosper. AIDS offers its franchisees a full course of training, help in site selection, a start-to-finish operating package, financial assistance, accounting help, and inventory control. In addition, we have a highly regarded reputation among our peers in the industry, with our customers, and with our suppliers. AIDS was selected by Montgomery Ward to serve as the licensed department operator to all of Ward's stores throughout the Norfolk, Virginia district."

Water, sewer exemptions for elderly

Water and sewer line fee exemptions for the elderly and handicapped will more than double over the next five years.

Virginia Beach City Council Monday evening raised the income limits for the exemptions to a maximum of $15,000 (from $8,500) which will cost the city $931,008 during the next five years starting with 1983-84 fees.

The cost of the program now is $378,612.

The limits adopted Monday are the same as those recently established by Council for real estate tax exemptions.

Exemptions will range from a 100 percent exemption for incomes up to $9,000 to a 20 percent exemption for incomes from $13,001 to $15,000.

The cost may vary, however, if the city makes changes in its water and sewer line connection ordinances.

Among these, Council has been considering a provision in the ordinance which requires the city to construct lines in neighborhoods where 51 percent of the residents petition for water or where 75 percent of the residents petition for sewer. At present the city has no choice but to provide the service. Heischberger suggested that the ordinance might be changed so that Council could make the decision. In this case fewer connections, including those for which exemptions are granted, would be made.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said however, that the city will need more than its present customers to support the cost of a water line from Lake Gaston.

A special election is being considered for bond referendums totaling $139 million for public improvements in Virginia Beach.

At an informal session Monday evening, Council members apparently agreed that the May 1 councilmanic election date was too soon to provide adequate time to promote the issue. Also expressed was the concern that the referendums would become a political issue.

The November general election, on the other hand is later than City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck would like. He said that he wants to avoid selling bonds in December when the best interest rates are not available, and he would like to start some of the projects earlier.

He suggested that Council may want to have a special election which would cost the city $50,000.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said that she would go along with Council but would prefer that the referendum not be held during the summer. She said she has heard comments that Council tries to put things over on the public by doing things during the summer of holidays.

That leaves the late spring or early fall. Muehlenbeck said he would return to Council with a estimated 5,463 dwelling units in Red Mill, Lagomar, Hell's Point, Lotus Garden, the campground and others.

Muehlenbeck reported also that the existing Lagomar subdivision of 123 dwelling units have paid fees totaling $19,090. Although the lagoon into which the lines discharge is private, the distribution system is owned by the city.

Of the approximately 215 lots in the subdivision, he said 36 were connected prior to the period when the city began charging connection fees and 56 lots will be charged connection fees of $10,920.

The line would be constructed from the Nimmo Church area to Atwoodtown Road. The ordinance states that it is Council's express intent that the project shall only service the area designated as Phase I on the service area map in the Comprehensive Plan.

The ordinance also states that the project would be constructed as soon as reasonably practical.

Baum sees the ordinance as a hardship (legally) in the future."

City Attorney Dale Bimson said that the city's position is more defensible when it is solving a particular problem.

The bonds would provide $27 million for roads; $22 million for schools; $49 million for (Lake Gaston water supply bonds, and $39.5 million for water and sewer bonds.

Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. said that if Council decides to go to referendum the vote would have to be unanimous to be effective. Council has not voted on the referendum ordinances yet.

He said if the May date was used, the city would not have time for a campaign and the referendums can become a "political football." He said, also, that more people would be at the polls in November and that more people come out against things than for things.

Councilman John A. Baum agreed that the time period was short to deal with the Operating Budget and the referendum at the same time.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings added discussion of the Comprehensive Plan, roads, and "so many other issues" at the same time make the 60 days inadequate.

Muehlenbeck said that he would like earlier than November action on Lake Gaston and the opportunity to start projects earlier.

Muehlenbeck said that the money would be borrowed over a four-to-five-year period but that he did not want to go to market in December when the rates are poorer.
